LINER LOST; 237 ARE MISSING

London, April 26.—A Reuter's dispatch from Capetown says the Portuguese mail steamer Mossamedes, which grounded several days ago at Cape Frio, Southwest Africa, has been abandoned, with no sign of the 237 passengers she carried. Thus far, the dispatch adds, no boats have been picked up and there is no indication of the fate of passengers and crew.

STORE IS LOOTED BY DRUG ADDICTS

Narcotic addicts, searching for drugs, are suspected in the burglary today of Henry W. Seltzer's drug store at No. 562 Blue Hill avenue, near Franklin Park.

The looters, who may be concerned in previous drug store breaks in Jamaica Plain and Roxbury districts, secured $150 cash, a quantity of liquors and some cigarettes and perfumes.

The taking of perfumes raised question whether the burglars were selecting gifts for feminine friends or even the possibility that a girl was concerned in the break.

SUGAR PRICE STILL SLIDING UPWARD

New York, April 26 (By Cosmopolitan News Service).—Cuban raw sugar today sold at 6¾ cents a pound, cost and freight, New York, up ¼ cent and a new high for this year. New Orleans refiners bought 10,000 bags at this figure for May shipment. Refined sugar for export was quoted at 8.10 cents a pound for May shipment and at 8.50 cents a pound for June shipment, up 20 points.

SOX OPEN AGAINST YANKS

American League Season in Boston Starts at Fenway Park This Afternoon

By NICK FLATLEY

This is another of those big Spring baseball days.

The Red Sox open their home season at the Fenway this afternoon, and American League fans will have their chance to howl. There are still American League fans, willing to howl their heads off, if Frank Chance can show them any real baseball. It's that kind of a year.

The Peerless Leader hasn't the greatest team in the world to work on, but he has plenty of fire and ambition, is a great director, and may be able to produce results.

He has shuffled his team all around. He hasn't any new real stars, perhaps, but he's in there trying, and so are his athletes, and your fan is perfectly willing to take that as a starter.

There will be a big crowd out to welcome the new Red Sox, and there will be quite a gang on hand to give a few cheers for Babe Ruth if he happens to bust one over the barriers, or a few raises if he fans, as the case may be.

With their usual luck the Sox drew the best card in the league for a starter, and that makes the opening day a complete success in prospect, at all events.

The Sox were smeared by the Yanks over at the Polo Grounds, but they showed a lot of fight, and came very close to grabbing off a couple

WOMAN SET LYNN FIRE, POLICE SAY

Fatal Blaze Due to Victim of Hallucinations, Inquest Testimony Shows

The fire of April 19 that destroyed the Essex Castle, Lynn, causing the death of five persons and injury to fourteen others, was set by Miss Alice Merriam, fifty years old, who occupied suite 32, in the opinion of Deputy State Fire Marshal Timothy C. Murphy, who conducted the inquest.

In his report, filed today, Deputy Murphy says the fire was started by Miss Merriam, the victim of hallucinations, who believed fire would drive away "evil spirits."

He said she set the fire while suffering one of these attacks.

Deputy Marshal Murphy also states that the loss of life was not due to the lack of proper exits or fire protection in the building, but because the fire was well under way before the occupants could take advantage of the avenues of escape.

SAY WARD 'BRIBED' FAMILY

Albany, N. Y., April 26 (By International News Service)—Attorney-General Sherman was blocked today from immediately securing the famous Ward cablegrams in connection with the probe which he is making into the Ward-Peters murder mystery by an order signed by Supreme Court Justice Staley.

New York, April 26.—Information that an entire Haverhill, Mass., family, after being cajoled into giving false testimony in regard to the character of the murdered Clarence Peters, was spirited to Europe by lawyers for Walter S. Ward, who admits killing Peters, is

Girls Must Roll 'Em Up and Put on Stays

The death warrant of the Flapper was read today by Dean Mary Sawyer of the fashionable Brookline High School.

The 150 members of the senior class were suddenly summoned to an audience with the dean in Schaler Hall.

Miss Sawyer wasted no time on introductory remarks.

"Some of you girls," she said, "are a disgrace to your sex. You come here in limousines, some of you in taxis, in a way that makes this school entrance look like a stage door.

"I know that some of you smoke.

PROBE GRAFT AMONG FEDERAL DRY AGENTS

Washington, April 26.—An investigation into the many charges that graft is being practiced on or among federal prohibition agents has been begun by the Internal Revenue Bureau, under which the prohibition unit operates. Treasury officials said today that considerable data had been laid before Commissioner Blair, but thus far the inquiry had disclosed no losses to the government.

4 FIREMEN FELLED BY SULPHUR FUMES

Lawrence, April 26.—Four firemen were overcome by sulphur fumes at a fire today which threatened the destruction of the Murray Wholesale Company plant. The victims were so seriously affected that physicians had to work on them for more than a half hour. They were then held in the hospital for further treatment.

MOTORCYCLE IN TAXI CRASH; COP BADLY HURT

Crashing into a taxicab with his motorcycle as he was pursuing an automobile speeder west along Commonwealth avenue today Patrolman William L. Dierman of the Back Bay station was hurled unconscious to the street and suffered a fracture of the left leg. The speeder escaped.

Dierman, proceeding at a terrific rate, was getting on his objective when an Armstrong Co. taxicab, operated by Francis J. Cullinan of No. 18 Gibson street, Dorchester, darted from Fairfield street directly into his path. Neither Cullinan nor Dierman was able to avert a collision.

Dierman was picked up by Cullinan and taken in the taxi to Station 14 and then at once to the City Hospital. There it was found that, in addition to the leg fracture, Dierman was suffering from multiple lacerations and abrasions on the body and head.

BATTLE ON BRINK OF HIGH ROOF

Thousands See a Thrilling Struggle on Top of Five-Story Office Building

Fighting desperately at the brink of a roof of a Scollay square building today, Attorney Charles R. Ross, sixty-two, and Miss Helen Ham, twenty-five, were separated by police officers who carried the girl to Haymarket Relief Hospital.

Scores of horrified spectators in adjoining office buildings, watched the lawyer chase the girl from a fire escape to one roof and thence to the roof of the Star Theatre where they grappled.

Twice they rolled to within a few inches of the edge only to get to their feet again and fight even more desperately.

Ross noted the girl standing on the fire escape outside his window in the Olympia building, No. 3 Tremont Row.

Knowing her from seeing her in the office of her brother, J. A. Ham, he went to the fire escape to inquire the trouble. Her actions had alarmed him.

The attorney summoned the elevator man and told him to get the

The defence of the millionaire slayer has been that Peters was a blackmailer.

DEMAND CABLEGRAMS.

Deputy Attorney-General Chambers has served on attorneys for Ward a copy of an order to turn over to him today the blackmail cablegrams in accordance with decision of Supreme Court Justice Staley.

Justice Staley has notified all the parties to the injunction suit to be in court for argument as to whether the documents are to be turned over immediately, or await an appeal.

It has also developed that Dudnan Rees, an employe of a New Rochelle drug store, who was riding near the Kensico Reservoir on the morning of May 16, was the first man to see the body of Peters. He will be examined at once.

YOUTHFUL THIEF SENT TO SHIRLEY

Sixteen-year-old George Brogna of Liverpool street, East Boston, was returned to Boys' Industrial School at Shirley today, because Judge Barnes of East Boston court thought he was too young to place among the criminals at Concord Reformatory. This was after Brogna had been found guilty of larceny of $825 and a nautical octant from Mute August Nelson of schooner Harper and $75 from Miss Laura Nolan.

GIRL ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN RICH MAN'S ROOMS

Thwarted in her third attempt at suicide within the last year, Mary Ella Whalen, twenty-two years old, No. 77 Liberty street, Chelsea, is recovering from the effects of inhaling gas, and from razor wounds on her wrists.

Miss Whalen went to the apartment of William Hirshon, wealthy Chelsea manufacturer, No. 16 Buckminster street, Allston, and forcing an entrance, telephoned to Hirshon, her former employer, at his office, that she planned to kill herself in the apartment.

A hurried pencilled note was found in the room. It said:

"I love you, Billy. I can't bear to have you stay away from me. I'm lonesome." There was no signature.

When police, accompanied by Hirshon, arrived, they found her unconscious in the bedroom suite. She was weak from loss of blood. Three gas jets were turned on.

At St. Elizabeth Hospital, Brighton, Miss Whalen said Hirshon had been good to her, but that she feared to lose his love. "I wanted to make him think I was dead so that he would care again," she said. "So I did what I did, and I didn't care whether I lived or died."

Hirshon is a widower with two children. The girl declared he has a home in East Lexington.

WAS THIRD ATTEMPT.

It was learned that Miss Whalen had previously slept all night in one of Hirshon's automobiles in a garage, awaiting Hirshon's appearance. When he did not appear, she went to his apartment.

Last November she leaped from a taxicab at Massachusetts and Commonwealth avenues, following a misunderstanding with Hirshon at a Hallowe'en party. She suffered severe scalp wounds.

Late last May she attempted to take her life by swallowing iodine, following an altercation with her mother.

Four years ago, she became engaged to marry Charles S. Cresser, Jr. Cresser, who is the son of a prominent stock broker, was convicted of having accepted entertainment at Boston hotels without paying for it. Miss Whalen kissed him goodby through the bars and promised she would wait for his release from an eighteen-months' sentence.

girl's brother and other assistance. He then climbed out.

When he reached the fire escape he called "Helen, wait just a minute. I want to see you." She screamed. This attracted the attention of tenants of the building.

The girl started running. She sped along the escape to a roof. Ross was at her heels. Owing to her youth she outdistanced him. She raced across this roof, five stories above the street, to a wall separating the Star Theatre. She was dressing herself up over this when Ross caught her heels.

Swinging both hands she closed with Ross and the pair fell to the roof. They rolled over several times regained their feet and fell again. As they struggled they neared the edge.

All the while the girl was screaming and Ross was crying for help. More confusion was caused by the cries of hysterical stenographers who watched helplessly.

POLICE COME TO RESCUE.

Men came tumbling down the escapes from offices on the various floors. Patrolmen Clarence Fitzsimmons and Arthur Sawyer reached the roof just as Ross was about to release his grasp from exhaustion.

They overpowered the girl with some difficulty. She was carried in an ambulance to the hospital, where she was found to be suffering from numerous bruises suffered in her falls about the roof.

Later in the day her brother took her to his home on Bulfinch street. Physicians at the Relief Hospital said Miss Ham was suffering from hysteria.

SHOPKEEPERS FINED IN POOR MILK CASES

Angelo Fuorro, baker at No. 238 Summer street, East Boston, and Carlo Crocetti, storekeeper at No. 305 Summer street, were fined $10 each in East Boston court today for having milk below standard. Dr. James O. Jordan of Boston Health Department was complainant.

RODOLPH VALENTINO.

Ladies, please, please!

When we offered to give away an autographed photograph of Rodolph Valentino to one and all who sent in a request for it, we didn't know that every female from two to ninety years old in all the New England States would write for a photo.

That's what happened. We haven't counted the letters yet, but there must be—at least—surely — well, there's an awful lot of 'em. It takes time to make and develop photos. Please be patient. It's bound to take several days before we can begin to mail these photos of Rody. But you'll get your photo, if you'll only be patient. As fast as they can be made and autographed, they'll be sent along.

ORDER GIRLS TO REFORM DRESS

I know that some of you use profanity. When the short skirt craze was current, you wore your dresses disgracefully high, up to your knees. Now that long skirts are in fashion, your dresses trail the dust of the street.

MUST BE STOPPED.

"You roll your stockings—a shocking breach of decency. You pile up your hair in foolish doughnut coiffures. You don't wear corsets any more. You use rouge.

"You have forgotten how to speak English correctly by the use of your silly flapper slang.

"And it's got to stop.

"And right now.

"You—Nellie—go right downstairs and wipe that rouge off your lips. And you—Lucy—take that ridiculous doughnut coiffure off and let your hair down. You're only a child. Agnes, raise your dress so that your ankles show. Margaret, I know at his very moment your stockings are rolled. Roll them up at once."

ALL BUT THE CORSETS.

Of the 150 girls present, about half were sent downstairs to their rooms to renovate their attire and appearance in accordance with the new censorship.

Following the lecture, a secret indignation meeting was held. The girls declared they were in favor of living up to Dean Sawyer's rules concerning smoking, profanity, doughnut coifs, rolled stockings and rouge.

But they insist they won't wear corsets and will not give up their long dresses.

Dean Sawyer is determined to enforce her rules. It will mean expulsion for any girl who violates the rules as laid down.

SUSPECT IN $140,000 BANK RAID RELEASED

Ralph Furcola, who was arrested yesterday in the South Station on one of the three men who shot a watchman in an Elderton, Pa., bank and escaped with $140,000, was released when he was arraigned before Judge Lourie charged with being a fugitive from justice. Furcola was believed to have $25,000 worth of the bank's bonds in his possession, and answered closely the description of one of the three bandits. The Elderton police, however, failed to answer a telegram from the Boston police announcing the arrest.

ABANDON PLAN TO ELEVATE NAVY GUNS

Washington, April 26.—The appropriation made by Congress at the last session for elevating the guns of the American fleet will not be used for that purpose, Secretary Denby announced today, because of the unintended erroneous statements made by Navy representatives in recommending the appropriation.

The Secretary intimated the department would go before the next Congress with a new program, that the record might be kept straight. He said this course had the approval of President Harding.

"During the discussion at the last Congress of the proposal to appropriate $5,500,000 for elevating the guns of thirteen battleships of the United States fleet, certain statements were made in regard to the disparity between the ranges of guns of the ships of the British fleet and those of the fleet of the United States.

"These statements were made in absolute good faith, but were shown by later reports from the government of Great Britain to have been exaggerated. While the disparity does exist, it is not so great as was then supposed.

"Upon the representations of the Navy Department, Congress appropriated the sum asked for. In view of the discrepancy between the statement of the department and the actual conditions, the department has determined not to employ the money appropriated for the purpose of increasing the elevation of the guns of the American fleet until further directed to do so by Congress."

NEW ANAESTHETIC TRIED ON DOCTOR

Toronto, April 26.—Dr. Fred G. Banting, discoverer of insulin, is the first person to have been anaesthetized by ethylene, a recent discovery said to have superior qualities as a general anaesthetic, according to Dr. W. E. Easton Brown of Toronto General Hospital. Dr. Banting volunteered to submit to the experiment, which was performed in Dr Brown's laboratory.

Dr. Banting

FIGHT KNIFE DUEL IN STREET OVER BET

New York, April 26. (By International News Service).—In view of hundreds of persons in Brooklyn, James "Bull" Anderson, a welterweight prizefighter, and Anthony Martello, his manager, today staged a furious fight with knives.

Panic aroused and police reserves were called. Both fighters were arrested. After fifteen stitches had been taken in the head, arms and shoulders of Anderson, and eleven in the upper part of Martello's body, Anderson told the police the trouble started over a bet he and Martello made over the Fred Fulton-Floyd Johnson fight.

GASTON SWORN IN AS LIBRARY TRUSTEE

Colonel William A. Gaston was today sworn in as a trustee of the Public Library by City Clerk James Donovan at City Hall. He thus assumes his first political office in municipal affairs. In administering the oath Mr. Donovan said: "It is the most honorable position to which a citizen can be called."

ATTACK ON FREE STATERS IN DUBLIN

By DANIEL O'CONNELL.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Dublin, April 26.—Heavy firing and bomb explosions broke out today, when snipers began an attack on Free State troops patrolling streets. Bombs were thrown from the roofs, but failed to do any damage beyond tearing up the street. The Free Staters returned the fire and dislodged the snipers.

Free State military headquarters announced the regulars had sustained no casualties.

Miss Ryan, sister of Minister of Defence Richard Mulcahy, and Miss O'Neill, two women members of the Republican forces, were released from prison today, after having been on a hunger strike thirty days. It is understood Miss Mary McSwiney, Miss O'Callaghan and other hunger strikers will be liberated tomorrow.

$75,000 LOSS IN BARNSTABLE FIRE

Barnstable, April 26.—A loss estimated at $75,000 was caused early today by a fire which destroyed two buildings and badly damaged a third in the centre of this town.

The fire started, presumably from a defective chimney, in a building occupied by the Union Furniture Company and the Nickerson House.

It spread to the combination store and dwelling of David Seabury, and both of these buildings were burned. The dwelling of Samuel Crocker was almost ruined.

Help was summoned from Falmouth, Harwich and Cotuit, and the fire was brought under control by the aid of three lines of hose which pumped water from Barnstable harbor.

ROBBED ON VISIT TO WIFE'S GRAVE

John Lulinsky, fifty-six, came down from Biddeford, Me., to do some shopping.

He arrived at noon, met some friends, whose names he conceals, and had some drinks.

The liquor turned his thoughts to his departed wife, and he engaged a taxi to go to Dedham to visit her grave.

Early today he was picked up unconscious with cuts and abrasions of the scalp at Lagrange and Corey streets, West Roxbury.

At City Hospital he told the police he remembers nothing after stepping in the machine.

He was penniless when picked up.

MISS GORDON'S UNCLE REFUSES TO PAY

Although Supreme Court Justice Martin of New York has declared John D. Gardiner the father of Mary Coakley's child and has ordered him to pay $7.50 a week for its support, the uncle of Danby Gordon has announced his fixation of refusing to comply.

Gardiner said: "The Coakley woman was a servant girl in the home of my sister—Dorothy's sister—back in 1913. When a child was born to her she threatened my sister with blackmail unless I would consent to give the child my name. My sister, though unnerved then, was living with Gods and the Coakley woman knew they were not married.

"For my sister's sake I did as I did at that time. But she knew and I know that Mary Coakley's child is not my child. I'll go to jail before I'll obey the court order to pay $7.50 a week for the child's support."

U. S. ATTY.-GEN. DAUGHERTY'S SON IN ASYLUM

Stamford, Ct., April 26.—Drayton M. Daugherty, son of the Attorney-General of the United States, who was brought to Stamford Hall Sanitarium by relatives, is not here because of mental condition or drugs, according to Dr. Frank W. Robertson, superintendent of that institution.

Dr Robertson today issued a statement in which he said that Daugherty was in "a debilitated condition, was nervous and needed a rest, and with long and careful treatment he will be restored to health."

That efforts will be made to have Daugherty committed to the institution by due process of law is admitted by Floyd C. Bartram, judge of probate for the Stamford district. Judge Bartram will begin his formal hearing on the application for commitment in a day or two.

NEW HIGH PRICES for sugar fellow citizens, 11 cents a pound, and going up. Predictions of crop shortage have sent Cuban sugar climbing. The Department of Commerce started it up and YOU will have the pleasure of paying the bills.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS ago yesterday the United States declared war on Spain. Already millions of Americans do not remember it. How quickly populations come and go!

When we finished beating Spain we set Cuba free, did Spain a favor, taking the Philippines off her hands and paid millions to the Spanish government. We paid other millions to the religious authorities in Rome. We never thought of telling Spain she must pay us thousands of millions. Europe has a different method of conducting war. That's one reason why she has so much war.

YOU WONDER how a handful of Englishmen govern three hundred million Asiatics in India. Your answer is "Those Asiatics are deeply superstitious. The greater the superstition, the easier to govern. Those that cannot think clearly cannot help themselves.

A TERRIBLE coal mine explosion occurred at Barbella, in India. Englishmen know that it was an explosion of coal dust that could have been prevented. Relatives of seventy-four Asiatics killed, including twenty-two women working in the mines, say the explosion was caused by seven ghosts. They try to propitiate those ghosts by sacrificing seven goats, one goat for each ghost. And that is what makes India easy to rule.

MR. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, amusing in his rage at any suggestion that he descended from a monkey, says: "I prefer to begin with God and reason down, rather than begin with a piece of dirt and reason up."

First, Darwin never said that Bryan or anyone else descended from monkeys.

Second, if Mr. Bryan accepts the Biblical account, he must "begin with a piece of dirt and reason up," for it says, Genesis, second chapter, seventh verse: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground."

THAT BOB-HAIRED girl judge who sentenced seven men to death in Moscow the other day, ought to satisfy good Governor Richardson of California. He says: "I wish every woman in California would get out and work in behalf of capital punishment." Citizeness Anna Gluzman, who has sentenced twenty-five, including one woman, to death so far, must delight Governor Richardson.

To the young Russian lady's credit it must be said that she refuses to witness executions.

THIS IS A DESCRIPTION of the female "hanging (or shooting) judge:"

"A cigarette held firmly between tight lips, fire of enthusiasm in brown eyes, slim, short, brown wavy bobbed hair, parted on the side like a man's; jaw stern, rough high boots, black skirt, workman's blouse, old brown sweater; only ornament a Communist badge."

MRS. F. A. BARNET, English woman, widow of Canon Barnet, seventy-one years old, decided to try oil painting, and after five lessons her first picture was accepted by the Royal Academy. The brain does not grow old unless you allow it to grow old.

HERE THEY ARE! SOME OF THE STARS IN THE GREATEST Show on Earth! These and many more are to appear tomorrow at the Colonial Theatre for the annual benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. The curtain rises at 2 o'clock on the most brilliant entertainment ever given on this or any other hemisphere.

THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH

"How's tricks?" asked the first actor.

"Fine. Two weeks more of layoff and I finish my season. How are things with you?"

"Best season I've ever had. Played fourteen benefits so far."

They laughed hollowly and passed along.

The actor's merchandise in his "act," his talent, his specialty. He has nothing else to sell. And every actor, every year, gives away what he is presumed to sell. I know of no lawyer who donates his services regularly as a benefit for some client or organization. How many doctors treat patients without charge, as benefits? What merchant is there who periodically gives away a portion of his receipts for charity?

The actor is the only professional person who is expected to donate his time and services—and that means his money—in behalf of some charity or other. It is a responsibility that he has always accepted joyously. The actor who finished a season of fourteen benefits, for which he didn't get a cent, is perhaps not typical. But every actor holds himself or herself ready at all times to play a benefit. That's why (contrary to the impression held by the public) so many actors die penniless. That's why the Actors' Fund Benefit at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow at 2 o'clock is the Greatest Show on Earth.

Cast Their Bread Upon Waters

All the year 'round actors cast their bread upon the waters. This is the one day in the year when it may come back to them after many days.

No show ever produced could possibly have the array of talent which will be seen at this show tomorrow. But that isn't what makes it the Greatest Show on Earth. It's the purpose of the show that makes it great.

The actors who are going to appear at this benefit tomorrow are among the best known in the country. They are all successful and prosperous. It is not for their benefit that the show is held. It is for the benefit of their brothers-in-greasepaint who have fallen by the wayside.

After all, the greatest drama critic in the world is Time. The juvenile of today is the character of tomorrow. And after tomorrow—what? The public is impatient with the ingenue who has wrinkles on her face. Age is the tragedy of this profession. That's why the old-timers stage so many futile come-backs. But they never come back. And there is always a spectre which awaits the mummers when their curtain falls—the spectre of being through, of being old, of seeing themselves supplanted in the public favor.

The popular stars of today are in the eyes and in the hearts of the public every day. That's part of their pay. But where are the stars of yesterday? Some two-score of them are at the home of the Actors' Fund in Staten Island. And hundreds of others, scattered throughout the country, aged, sick and frequently destitute, are provided for by the Actors' Fund.

$25 Worth of Fun for One Ticket

Al Jolson's playing in town. If you want to see him in "Bombo" you have to pay $3.30 for a ticket—Al admits it's worth it. It would cost a similar amount to see Helen Hayes in "To the Ladies," or Percy Pollock in "Lightnin'," or Ernest Truex in "Six Cylinder Love," or Mitzi in "Minnie and Me," or Alexandra Carlisle in "The Fool." Almost $25 if you wanted to see these stars in their own shows. And yet, tomorrow at the Colonial, you can see them all in one show at prices ranging from $1 to $3.50. And in addition you can see and hear June Walker, Oscar Figman, Boyd Marshall, Grace Perkins, Sidney Greenstreet, Louise Prussing and Bert Fingibbon.

And if that doesn't give you your money's worth, you'll see Frances Brandt and Albert Howson, Helen Spring, Mary Halliday, Eunice Hunt, Jason Robarts, Oukes and De Lour, Lillian Norwood, Sam Howard, Hilda Vaughn, Thomas McLarnie, Julie Brown, Nova Dempsey, Margaret Wood, Nellie Fillmore and W. Edward Boyle and Julian Eltinge.

And if that doesn't drag you in, you'll hear the Copley-Plaza Orchestra, and you'll see one of the most marvelous fashion revues ever put onto any stage.

And if all that doesn't tempt you, you'll come because this benefit is for those who always play the benefits for YOU.

If there's a single seat empty in the Colonial Theatre tomorrow afternoon—

But there won't be. Because its the Greatest Show on Earth.

MRS. PRINCE ADMITS SHE WILL MARRY

Mrs. Elizabeth Harding Prince, well-known divorcee, stated in an interview in her suite at the Hotel Vendome, that she will marry Eugene V. R. Thayer as soon as it is legally possible." She made this statement, she said, to clarify the uncertainty which has followed her since her divorce from F. H. Prince, famous aviator, in Paris.

At present Mrs. Prince is residing with her father, W. P. G. Harding, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

HARVARD STUDENTS GET LIQUOR

Royal Pomp at Duke's Wedding

DRINKING AT HARVARD EXPOSED

French Professor Smells Liquor on Students; Raps Society Tipplers

Fair Harvard is blushing a real crimson.

It is all a result of Professor Henri Hauser's bold, dripping words that drinking is more or less prevalent among Cambridge students, and that he has smelled whiskey on some breaths.

Not only has Professor Hauser smelled the contraband liquor in the confines of the great university, but he has actually seen the dire results that follow excessive indulgence in it.

Confirming an article, "Dry America: Appearances and Realities," which he contributed to the columns of "L'Information," a Paris newspaper, Professor Hauser told a Boston American representative today of a scene he witnessed at one of Harvard's prominent campus gates last Winter.

LIKE WEEPING WILLOW.

There were three Harvard students and one of them was here de combat in every sense of the French expression. In fact, he drooped like a weeping willow and it was only by the herculean efforts of his companions, acting as embarassed props, that the sagging worshipper of Bacchus was led or carried from the gate to his room.

Professor Hauser saw this and made mental reservation that prohibition doesn't have the kick contained in the stuff it's supposed to prohibit.

The professor is not excited over the matter; he has just casually included his observations at Harvard in a general summary of his impressions of how prohibition isn't prohibiting in America. He doesn't think Harvard lads are going to the demnition bow wows.

FACULTY IS DRY.

In fact he thinks Harvard students comport themselves pretty well, prohibitionally speaking, in comparison with what he hears of the libatory going-ons of students in other colleges of the country.

"Have you ever detected the odor of liquor on the breaths of any of the Harvard faculty?" the professor was asked.

He chuckled. Then he smiled—broadly. Then he laughed aloud.

"No, no, no," he replied. "I have been many times to some of their homes. I have dined delightfully, but there was nothing of spirits there. Ah, no."

And he shrugged his shoulders resignedly.

BEEN TOO BUSY.

The professor asserted he had not discussed the liquor question with President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, though perhaps he might some time.

He has been here only since last February, being an exchange professor at Harvard from the University of Paris, where he holds a chair of economic history.

He has been too busy on professional matters with President Lowell

CONSTABLES BEATEN BY STRIKERS

Miners Turn Hose on Asbestos Offices and Drive the Manager Out of Town

Thetford Mines, Quebec, April 26.—A crowd of 1,500 miners, who attacked the offices of the Asbestos Corporation late last night, today had succeeded in driving Colonel C. H. McNutt, assistant general manager, out of town for the second time and in sending forty special constables scurrying back to Sherbrooke.

The constables had been sent to the mines from Montreal by a private detective agency, after Colonel McNutt's first ejection from the town. The colonel returned with them.

Soon after they had entrenched themselves in the company's offices a mob commandeered the town's fire apparatus and then attacked them with stones and firehose, forcing them to flee after blank shots fired over the heads of the miners had failed to check the charge.

The mines of the Asbestos Corporation of Canada, the largest of their kind in the world, are located about fifty miles from Sherbrooke.

With neighboring gits, the mines produce about nine-tenths of the world's supply. Most of the output goes to the United States in a raw state for manufacturing purposes.

About 2,000 men are employed in the industry. About 25 per cent. are reported to be on strike.

Asbestos Mine Owners Appeal for Protection

Montreal, April 26.—W. G. Ross, president of the Asbestos Corporation of Canada, today appealed to Attorney General Tascereau for protection, asserting that strikers at the Thetford mines, after driving 40 constables out of town, were threatening to dynamite public buildings and mine structures.

Mr. Ross who described conditions at the mines as worse than those in Russia, asserted the strikers had raided all the hardware stores in the district and seized fire-arms and dynamite. He said the company entertained fear for lives and property.

DUKE OF YORK AND HIS PEERESS BRIDE

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF YORK

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon who today became the bride of Prince Albert, heir to the British throne. The wedding was held amid a carnival atmosphere equalling that of the mid-Victorian era. All England paid the couple homage. Inset is the Duke of York, the happy bridegroom.

BRIDAL PAIR CHEERED BY MILLIONS

By the Associated Press.

London, April 26.—Albert, Duke of York, was united in marriage with Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon in solemn old Westminster Abbey at noon today with a pomp and panoply reminiscent of the days of the mid-Victorian era and amid the tumultuous demonstrations of the vast throngs that gathered under threatening skies to witness the wedding pageant.

As the cortege entered the abbey a slight drizzle of rain fell, but soon afterward the sun broke through the clouds, and as the royal pair made their exit they were greeted with brilliant sunshine, recalling the old saying:

"Happy is the bride the sun shines on."

It was the second time in a little more than a year that the King and Queen of England gave one of their children in wedlock to a person outside the realm of royalty.

Just before the wedding King George conferred on the bride-to-be the dignity of a princess.

While the marriage of the sovereign's second son did not stir the popular imagination of the British empire to the same extent as did Princess Mary's wedding, the romance which turned a simple Scottish girl into a royal prince's bride and elevated her from a position of relative obscurity to the place of the fourth lady of the land captured the hearts of the English people.

The fact that Lady Elizabeth's marriage to the Duke of York makes her eligible to wear the crown of the empire in the event anything untoward befalls the Prince of Wales, imparted an additional note of interest and significance to the event.

Today's ceremony within the hallowed walls of the historic Abbey, which has witnessed the supreme joys and sorrows of the nation for ages past, was both a great religious and social event, and was marked by a glittering exhibition of fashion and sumptuous jewels.

ROYALTY AT WEDDING.

Eight hundred of England's greatest luminaries in State, court, diplomacy and society, as well as an impressive assemblage of foreign princes, dukes, duchesses and others of rank and title, were there, attired in finery and jewelled embellishments that represented the proverbial King's ransom.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by England's most distinguished prelates, solemnized the union. The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince Henry, acted as best men, but it was Wales who produced the ring at the critical moment.

The eight bridesmaids were chosen mainly from among the personal friends of the bride. They were dressed in immaculate ivory-white crepe chiffon trimmed with Nottingham lace, and presented a fairy-like picture as they attended the bride.

HUNGER STRIKER IN DIVORCE SUIT

Skowhegan, Me., April 26.—Although she had gone on a ten-day hunger strike for the avowed purpose of winning back the affection of her husband, Mrs. Bertha C. Britton of this city failed to contest the suit for divorce opened by the former before Judge C. J. Dunn in the Supreme Court. Her husband alleged cruel and abusive treatment. The court took the case under advisement. It has been announced that a previous property settlement had been made.

HOLD UP NAVY PAY SCHEDULES

Washington, April 26.—After receiving protests from labor organizations and from naval authorities in charge of various shore establishments, the Navy Department today announced that the wage schedules recently promulgated to become effective May 1, would be recalled and revised.

Orders were issued today for the convening of new boards at the various yards to collect data and to recommend a revised scale to be effective July 1, and to continue until January 1, 1924. Pending this revision the department announced "no reductions will be made from the scale which was put into effect September 16, 1921," and upon which wages of civilian employes of the navy are now based.

are no landing places in the neighborhood of Cape Frio and that a heavy sea is running today, grave anxiety is felt for the safety of the boats.

The Mossamedes' passengers included 29 women and 25 children. Two of them were British; the rest Portuguese.

The British steamer, the dispatch says, is still searching for the boats. If necessary, the German steamer Urandi, which is boating at Walvis, will assist in the search.

The Mossamedes, a vessel of 4,615 tons, left Capetown last Friday for the West Coast. Just when she went ashore is unknown, but she sent out an S.O.S. call for help.

The British steamer Port Victor, which was 290 miles away, raced to her assistance, arriving about midnight on Tuesday.

The Port Victor found the steamer abandoned.

BARR, GRATEFUL FOR PAROLE, WILL GO STRAIGHT

PRISONER JAILED 23 YEARS THANKS HIS HELPERS

By HAROLD H. HALL.

"I shall never disappoint my friends. I shall keep faith with them. I can never forget that I have a responsibility that binds me for life. I can never forget what my friends and the Boston American have done for me. Thank them all for me and tell them this: I shall go straight until I die."

That is the message which James Barr sends today from his cell in the State prison where he has spent the last twenty-three years because of a social crime he committed.

It is probably the last message that James Barr will ever send from the drab old prison in Charlestown. After a fight of four years James Barr has won. The Governor's Council has answered his plea for freedom and commuted his life sentence to a sentence of from thirty years to life. He is now eligible for parole and will be released either Saturday of this week or Tuesday of next.

LIFE ONCE MORE SWEET.

Today the gray walls of the State prison did not look quite so drab to this little old man who has spent the best part of his life within them. He saw patches of sunlight in the corridors which he never knew were there before. Life was once more sweet for James Barr.

It is but a matter of a few short days until he will walk out of the prison gates a free man. He will go forth not to the arms of his family—they have cast him aside—but to a comfortable home in the South End which has been furnished by Captain Alfred Porte. He will find a job waiting for him with one of Boston's biggest department stores. James Barr will be given the chance to start life anew.

BARR OVERJOYED.

"It is too good to be true," he told the writer after the Governor's Council had given out its decision. "I had about given up hope. There had been so many disappointments that I thought today would be but a repetition of the other days.

"Mere words cannot express the happiness that is mine today. I don't believe I ever knew what real joy was before. You cannot realize how I feel. You have to spend nearly a quarter of a century in here to know what I mean.

"Last week, when the Council postponed action on my case, I thought that all was lost. For a time I gave up all hope. It seemed as though there was nothing left to live for. But after the first day of grief I bucked up again and waited—it seems as though that is the biggest thing you do in prison. Oh, it is the terrible waiting that tears the very heart out of you. And when you have nothing to wait for but death—well I can't tell you how it feels.

THANKS FRIENDS.

"Most of the boys have something to look forward to. They have a definite sentence. They wait for that to end. I had nothing coming to me but death. But it is all over now. All I can do is thank my thousands of friends and thank the Boston American. I never knew a newspaper to go through for a man the way the Boston American has for me. It was simply wonderful.

"And those wonderful Scotch people. They have done for me what you would expect none but a relative to do. I can never repay them. All I can do is thank them and promise them that I shall never disappoint them. I shall go straight. Tell them that.

WILL MAKE GOOD.

"I want to thank the Parole Board, the Governor and his Council, too. They showed faith in me. I shall prove to them that they made no mistake. The conditions attached to my parole shall never be violated by me.

"From now until I die I shall spend my time making good. If hard work and clean living will do that I shall not fail. I am happy, oh, so happy. Just tell them all that. Thank them a million times. Thank your paper."

The State Board of Parole will meet either Saturday or next Tuesday and take the final action necessary to release Barr. It is merely a matter of routine. That James Barr will be free. He will have to stay away from Fitchburg—he cannot go nearer the city than fifteen miles from its limits. He will not be allowed to write to any members of his family and he will not be allowed to touch intoxicating liquor.

"Isn't it wonderful that I should be released in the Spring of the year," said Barr, "just when the buds are beginning to peep forth from their Winter prisons. Oh, I am happy."

FOOD QUERY DEPARTMENT

YOUR FOOD PURCHASING DIFFICULTIES SOLVED

A THURSDAY FEATURE

Are you at a loss as to where you can secure some particular brand or kind of foodstuffs? If so, write the Boston American Food Query Editor. We will answer your inquiry in these columns as quickly as possible.

Food Query Editor:

Opening my office Monday morning, I was greeted by one of my customers asking me why Boston papers were quoting the price of potatoes at $1.65 per hundred—that he saw it in the Sunday paper and was very much peeved, as I had previously sold him a car at $2.50 per hundred sacked. In a few minutes two other people called me with the same complaint. The market has not been $1.65 on potatoes since last Fall, and why these false statements are made I cannot understand. You people print matters in your papers which you want people to believe, but if the truth is as misconstrued on other commodities as it has been on potatoes it is a wonder that anyone would read your quotations with any degree of confidence. To my mind, it hurts any paper to print a statement as far from the truth as this quotation. Trusting you can explain this matter, I remain

F. C. HATCH.

No. 131 State street, Boston.

In answering your letter, let's start right off by saying that we do not print a Sunday paper; therefore, we did not quote potatoes. We can readily understand how a quotation of $1.65 per hundred on potatoes in a Boston paper would get your customers up in arms where you have been charging $2.50 per hundred. In this column we have on two different occasions given our views on the potato situation, and we have never quoted Maine potatoes less than $2.50 per hundred. We realize the market today is from $2.40 to $2.50 per hundred put up in two-bushel sacks. For your information, would say that we realize the importance of making market quotations absolutely correct and endeavor at all times to have them right.

Food Query Editor:

Can you inform me through your very helpful column where Agar-Agar Gelatine can be procured? Have not been able to find it in Boston. Thank you.

A. M. HOVEY.

Mansfield, Mass.

The S. S. Pierce Company carry the Agar-Agar Wafers and also carry the same product in bulk. The article we refer to is kind of a Japanese sea-weed or sea-moss, and it comes put up in various varieties of edible. Same is supposed to be a new idea in drugless laxatives.

Food Query Editor:

I understand one can buy grated cheese put up in little bags. I have always had to buy it in glass jars, and, outside of the fact that it being expensive buying it this way, it is quite wasteful, as we use only a small quantity at a time. Often quite a lot of the jar is thrown away, as we do not like to use cheese that has been laying around too long. If you know of a place where I could buy the above cheese put up this way we would appreciate it if you will tell us in your column. I like to use this cheese for macaroni and welsh rare bit, also potatoes au gratin.

MRS. D. KELLEHER.

Ridge avenue, Newton Centre, Mass.

MacLarens is putting up a full-cream dehydrated grated cheese, fully prepared and seasoned, put us in glazed paper bags, net weight 1¼ ounces. We understand this is an entirely new article on the market. You can purchase some at Sharp's Market, No. 177 Federal street, Boston, Mass.

Food Query Editor:

I tried a new mayonnaise dressing they were demonstrating in the Houghton & Dutton grocery department the other day. It was very delicious, and I meant to come back and purchase some, but neglected to do so. The name of this salad dressing I think was Dorcy. I wonder if I could get this same salad dressing somewhere around this neighborhood, as I do not care to go all the way in town to buy this one article.

MRS. ROGER WHITNEY.

Hancock street, Quincy, Mass.

There is a demonstration in the Houghton & Dutton grocery department of a Dorcco brand of mayonnaise. Most likely this is the one you refer to. This article is put up by the Arthur E. Dorr Company, and you could secure same from their Quincy store.

Food Query Editor:

Have you ever heard of the Niagara brand of hams, if so could you tell me where I could purchase one. I have been in Europe for the past two years and since my return have been unable to find any place that handles this particular brand. I think this ham is put up in New York state, to the best of my recollection. Thanking you,

MRS. CHARLES PARKER.

965 Norfolk avenue, Wollaston, Mass.

You can secure Niagara brand of ham at the following places: W. A. Doe & Co., H. A. Lowell & Co., S. H. Wilkins and the Original Squire Co., all of Faneuil Hall Market. This ham is put up by the Jacobs Dold Packing Co. of Buffalo, N. Y.

Food Query Editor:

I have noticed in your column on one or two occasions you answering an inquiry about Imported Canadian Wiltshire bacon. I am interested to know just how this Canadian bacon differs from our bacon. If it is any better than American bacon and if any more expensive, I suppose it is. Thanking you for the above information,

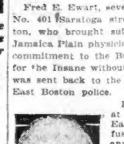
MRS. GEORGE M. HALL.

Mattapan, Mass.

The Wiltshire bacon in the first place is cured entirely different from our products, as the entire side of a hog is cured at the one time. The Wiltshire sides are also a dried, salted product and generally very mild cure. Here in the United States we cure a ham, say 60 days, and bacon 20 days, and so on. The whole side of a Wiltshire bacon is cured the same length of time. Whether this bacon is finer than our product is a matter of taste. Many people think it is. It is higher price than our bacon for the reason that hogs in Canada cost more than our hogs and we also have to pay duty on goods coming in from across the border. If you are interested enough you could go into Sharp's Market, 177 Federal street, and you could see a whole Wiltshire side hanging up there, and am sure that they would be glad to show you the various cuts.

SUES DOCTORS; SENT BACK TO MAD HOUSE

Fred E. Ewart, seventy years old, No. 401 Saratoga street, East Boston, who brought suit against two Jamaica Plain physicians for alleged commitment to the Boston Hospital for the Insane without examination, was sent back to the institution by East Boston police.



Fred E. Ewart.

Police officers at station No. 7, East Boston, refused to give any reason for the re-commitment of Ewart.

Attorney Arthur E. Reimer, counsel for Ewart, was unable to give any reason for the action of the police.

Ewart was confined to the hospital for the insane from November 15, 1921, to November 28, 1922. He was committed in Probate Court on the certification of Dr. Charles Malone and Dr. Lawrence Collier.

It is against these two physicians that Ewart brought suit for $50,000 for alleged commitment without examination.

According to the defendants, Dr. Malone was asked to examine Ewart by his wife, who feared him. He called Dr. Collier into consultation and as a result recommended he be sent to the hospital for the insane.

HELD ON CHARGE OF ROBBING STORE

Probable cause was found by Judge Sullivan in the Charlestown Court in the case of Nicholas J. Murray, forty-nine years old, of No. 195 Main street, Charlestown, charged with breaking and entering and larceny of fifty yards of cretonne cloth, valued at $18.50, from the store of Herman R. Isenberg at No. 199 Main street, Charlestown, and his was held in $500 for the May term of the Superior Court. Patrolman Blondin found a window broken in the store and arrested Murray, who lives a few doors away, and recovered the cloth.

HOOD IS SPEAKER AT EMPLOYES' DINNER

C. H. Hood, president of H. P. Hood & Sons, was the speaker at the dinner of the employes of Charlestown branch of the company at the Hotel Brunswick. A. A. Nickerson, the comptroller was given a traveling bag and kit. The dinner was in charge of H. A. Carrick, H. E. Weldon, Miss E. J. Jones and Miss B. A. Ogler.

Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell Goes Abroad, Betty Alden Reports

BY BETTY ALDEN.

THAT slender matron, Mrs. N. Penrose Hallowell has sailed for England to visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Crocker (Mary Hallowell.)

It was last September that the oldest daughter of the N. Penrose Hallowells became the bride of young Crocker, a Harvard '22 man, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Crocker, who have a big estate in Fitchburg known as "The Knoll."

Shortly after their marriage John Crocker took his youthful bride to Oxford, England, where he is studying at the University. The former Mary Hallowell was introduced to society two Winters ago, the announcement of her betrothal to Mr. Crocker being made that same year.

Mrs. Hallowell, a tall brunette, is one of the smart set's most attractive and youthful looking matrons. Her second daughter, Miss Hannah Hallowell, is to be one of the buds of the coming season, I believe. There is a third Daughter, Miss Allen Hallowell.

JOHN BOWDITCH has arrived from Boston in New York, where he is stopping at the Hotel Lorraine.

ARTISTIC Olivia James is on the junior committee for the Aviation Ball coming to the Copley-Plaza a week from Friday. There's quite a large and distinguished group in charge of the affair, which promises to be one of the most colorful events of the season.

Miss James, the older daughter of Professor and Mrs. Edward H. James of Mt. Vernon street, has made quite a name for herself because of her clever designs for stage settings. Like her sister, Mary James, she's a student at the Museum School of Fine Arts.

Apropos of the Aviation Ball—that eminent artist, John Lavalle, is to take care of the decorations for that evening, sufficient assurance that the ball room will be a feast for the eyes. Just now many of the fashionable coterie are attending the exhibition of portrait drawings done by this painter, the exhibition taking place at Doll & Richards, No. 71 Newbury street, and closing next Wednesday. There's a striking portrait of the artist's grandfather, Edward C. Johnson, while the one of Philip L. Hale, himself a noted artist, is attracting not a little attention. Others in the group include portraits of Mrs. Arthur Richmond (Jessie Means) and another of dark-haired Ellen Curtis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Curtis.

COMMUNISTS VOTE TO SEIZE INDUSTRIES

Moscow, April 26 (By Associated Press)—The Communist congress adjourned today after approving without change Trotzky's plan to take over the heavy industries.

The congress also approved Commissioner Stalin's recommendation with regard to nationalities. Premier Lenin's scheme for control of state apparatus and M. Kamenoff's proposal for the substitution of a partly monetary tax for the present peasant levy.

The Congress elected a central committee, the personnel of which will be virtually the same as last year's. A control commission of fifty Communists to carry out Premier Lenin's recommendation, which would extend party control and supervision to all branches of the government, was named.

M. Zinovieff, chairman of the executive committee of the Third Internationale, said in a closing address that the Congress had demonstrated the fact that there would be no retirement from the dictatorship of the proletariat.

SAVED FROM DEATH ON B. & M. TRACKS

Daniel Donovan, fifty-five years old, narrowly escaped being hit by a Boston & Maine express. Lieutenant Arthur Duffey of the railroad police saw the man walking along the tracks near the East Somerville station and rushed to pull him aside. Donovan was booked on a charge of intoxication.

HUB NAVY YARD MEN THREATEN TO STRIKE

Six hundred civilian employes of the Charlestown Navy Yard in meeting at Roughan's Hall notified Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt that unless he gives them a hearing on their protest of the reductions in the new wage scale, they will meet again on Monday next to consider a strike.

Mayor Curley and Congressman Tague addressed the men, expressing themselves in complete sympathy with their attitude and sharply criticizing the Navy Department because of the wage reductions. Indorsement of their protest will be asked of the Massachusetts Legislature by Representative John McCarthy of Ward 4.

The committee that notified Mr. Roosevelt were: Charles McCombs, William Paul, Charles Hughes, Edward J. Connors, James D. Kelleher, William Miles and Joseph R. Dean.

TWO GIVE NEW TESTIMONY FOR PAPPAS

Two new informants, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Wanner, have appeared, who are willing to corroborate testimony that Mrs. Alice Arsenault, for whose murder on December 25, 1919, Paul Pappas has been convicted, was alive and transacted business on December 26, 1919.

Mrs. Louise Wanner is a life-long friend of Clara Ditson, one of the principal witnesses in the Pappas case. In a statement now made public, she tells why Mrs. Ditson did not volunteer her information earlier in the Pappas trial.

"I have known Clara Ditson all my life. I have always visited her at her home, and for that matter, I still do," she told a Boston American reporter.

"On one of these visits, about three months before Mrs. Arsenault was murdered, I was introduced to Mrs. Arsenault.

"When Mrs. Arsenault left, Clara told me she saw her three or four times a week, and that she used to take care of the woman's real estate transactions for her. She also told me Mrs. Arsenault did not live a moral life.

FINDING OF BODY.

"Some time in May, 1920, I read of the finding of Mrs. Arsenault's body. That night my husband and I went to Clara Ditson's house to get first-hand news.

"The first thing Clara said when we started to talk about the murder was: 'She couldn't have been dead on December 25, because I talked to her on December 26 about some rooms she had to let.

"'I remember it was not December 25, because I would not transact business on a holiday. She came to my house the day after Christmas.' These were her very words.

SHE TOLD DETECTIVES.

"When Pappas was arrested, detectives went to Clara's house and questioned her. She told them they had the wrong man, but they laughed at her and went away.

"When I read headlines in the papers that Pappas had only one week to live, I got all worked up. Knowing what I did about Clara Ditson, I determined to make her speak.

"My first move was to telephone the Greek Church and locate Fr. Alexopoulous. That was Friday, March 16, 1923. I told him all I knew and he promised to communicate with Pappas' attorneys. They acted immediately.

"Then I visited Clara herself. She seemed very happy and told me a great load had been lifted from her shoulders.

"When I asked her why she had not told what she knew before, she answered that the detectives knew where she was, but that they hadn't bothered to go near her.

'HANDSOMEST MAN' IN MOUNT HOPE DANCE

The Mount Hope Town Club will hold their fourth annual dance this evening at Philbrick Hall, Mount Hope. As this dance will be in aid of the ball team a large crowd is expected to attend.

A special feature will be the selection of the handsomest man attending, also an exhibition dance by Jimmie Ryan and sister.

The committee in charge consists of Joseph Hogan, chairman; Edward Curley, George Nelson, John Mulvey, William J. O'Rourke and Al Alberts.

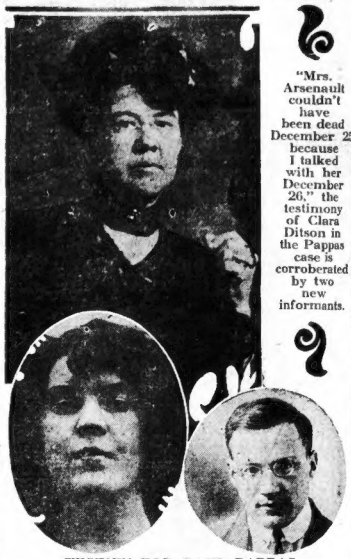
TRIO WHO SUPPORT PAPPAS' DEFENCE



"Mrs. Arsenault couldn't have been dead December 25 because I talked with her December 26," the testimony of Clara Ditson in the Pappas case is corroborated by two new informants.

TESTIFY FOR PAUL PAPPAS

$100,000 FIRE IN MAINE PLANT

Gardiner, Me., April 26.—The plant of the Alger Box Company was destroyed by fire with a loss estimated at $100,000. The blaze started in the storehouse.

Two explosions occurred and three firemen were slightly injured. Absence of wind saved the plant of the Hazzard Shoe Company and the mills of James Walker & Son and the Grey-Hildreth Company, located nearby.

The mill is a branch plant of the Alger Box Company at Middleboro, Mass. It is understood the plant will be rebuilt at once. About fifty hands are employed.

FULLER TO HUNT CHICKEN THIEVES

Exeter, N. H., April 26.—Lieutenant Governor Alvan T. Fuller, who has a large stock farm at Little Boar's Head, Rye Beach, has been appointed deputy in an organization formed among Rockingham County poultrymen to run down chicken thieves.

MARRIAGE BAN FOR DEFECTIVES AND CROOKS

Chicago, April 26.—A plan for reorganization of society by which the mentally deficient, convicted criminals and illiterate would be disfranchised and intermarriage between the disfranchised and the remaining "full citizens" would be prohibited, was advocated here by Professor William McDougall of Harvard University.

Professor McDougall, who occupies the chair of psychology at Harvard, spoke before students of Northwestern University.

Prof. McDougall.

After dividing society into two great classes, the plan advocated by Professor McDougall would restrict the number of offspring in the disfranchised class by a "deliberate social control dictated by principles of national ethics."

The penalty for violation of the prohibition of inter-marriage between the two classes would be disfranchisement of the "full citizen who married out of his class."

In between Class "A" and Class "C" as professor McDougall termed them, he would have Class "B," the members of which would occupy an intermediate status and would serve from twenty to twenty-five years as probationers for the upper class.

Children of Class "A" parents, for instance, would have the status of Class "B" as their birthright, with promotion or demotion as an ultimate result, depending on their conduct.

ROXBURY FRUIT MAN BEATEN UP BY TRIO

Fred Kalsuonba, thirty-five years old, a fruit dealer, was badly beaten at his store, No. 23 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, by three men in a controversy over the payment for some articles he claimed the trio purchased from him. He was treated at the City Hospital for severe cuts and bruises of the face and head. Kalsuonba says he knows his assailants and will apply for warrants for their arrests.

$800,000 WAS STOLEN TO PLAY THE MARKET

York, Pa., April 26.—State banking officials today continued their investigation at the City Bank of York in an effort to check up the shortage, estimated at approximately $1,000,000, due to the alleged defalcations of Thomas B. Baird, cashier, and William H. Bolt, his assistant.

The two admitted misappropriating funds aggregating $960,000.

Baird placed the total of his peculations at $800,000 and said his manipulation of the bank's funds had been going on for twenty-five years. He said that speculation in the stock market, principally in sugar and oil stocks, had been responsible for his downfall. He said that four of five years ago he had lost $250,000 in the sugar market alone. Another venture in which he lost $150,000 was the purchase of the Vulture Mining Company.

Bolt, said to have admitted taking about $160,000, declared that he had not speculated, but that the "high cost of living" had forced him to take the money.

Few assets remain in the possession of either man so far as the authorities have been able to learn.

BRIDE OF WEEK HALES MATE INTO COURT

An ardent suitor before marriage was John Kamel of No. 102 Harvard street, South End, according to his young wife who married him following a week's romance and then, one week later, had him arrested for making false entries in a bank book he promised to turn over to her after the ceremony.

They were married April 14th. John had to post $500 as guarantee of good faith. He lacked cash and he offered a bank book showing entries to $878. The bride discovered after the wedding that there was but five dollars on the account.

"John begged me to marry him on his knees. He swore he would make me a good husband, said Mrs. Kamel today. "But two days after the ceremony he hit me and punched me until I yelled for mercy.

"He told me I could throw up my job as it would not be necessary for me to work any more. I was to stay home and keep house and he would give me all the money I needed.

"I soon found out different and now I am a total wreck. He told me of property in Syria and of his big salary for working at the Hotel Touraine."

Mrs. Kamel is the daughter of the late Rev. George Maloof, who founded the Syrian Orthodox Church of St. George on Hudson street. Her maiden name was Nellie Elias Maloof.

'DAVID' PITCHER AND GIRL ARE ARRESTED

St. Joseph, Mich., April 26.—Two members of the House of David, subject of an investigation by a special Grand Jury because of charges of immorality among members of the colony, were arrested today at Stevensville, twelve miles south of here, when they sought to leave the jurisdiction of Berrien County.

They were Benjamin Hill, pitcher for the House of David baseball team and Mrs. Lillian Hannaford, twenty-six years old.

They left the colony shortly before midnight in a closed automobile and at Stevensville bought tickets to Chicago.

Sheriff George Stevens, who hurried to Stevensville to subpoena the pair to appear today before the Grand Jury, said they promised to tell all they know about the cult.

GIRL IS JAILED.

Hill and his companion traveled with trunks on which their names had been blotted out so recently that the paint still was damp, Sheriff Bridgman said. The sheriff deputized the clerk at the village hotel and left the couple in his custody.

They made the second and third members of the colony in custody. The other is Phoebe Robertson, seventeen years old, one of three young girls who planned to marry yesterday but was prevented by Attorney-General Daugherty.

She was ordered to jail by Judge Harry Dingeman, the one-man Grand Jury, because, the order stated, she had "deliberately falsified part of her testimony and evaded other questions."

The State's investigation took a new turn when six members of the sect were denied marriage licenses by order of Attorney-General Daugherty.

Later it was discovered another couple from the colony had obtained a license without the knowledge of the attorney-general and were married last night.

ROUND UP GIRLS.

While the disappointed couples were returning home subpoenas were hurriedly issued for the three prospective brides and members of the State constabulary and Sheriff Bridgman, were dispatched to bring them before the Grand Jury.

The officers failed to find them but brought in Bessie Daniels, 18 years old, who was married last night to Emerald Woodward, also 18, and the authorities of the House of David colony promised to produce the other girls.

None of the twenty-eight members of the cult who were married last week in group weddings on the eve of the State's investigation, were questioned today. Three former members of the Purnell sect and Mrs. Woodward, occupying the entire day.

ATTY. HORGAN SAVES FAMILY FROM FIRE

Attorney Francis J. Horgan, the first State president of the Friends of Irish Freedom and once a candidate for Congress in opposition to Congressman George H. Tinkham, rescued his wife and seven children from fire which threatened to destroy his home at No. 322 Arborway, Jamaica Plain, early today.

Mr. Horgan was awakened by dense clouds of smoke which made their way into his bedroom. Hurriedly investigating, he found the first floor of his home to be afire and flames rapidly making headway toward the second floor, where his wife and children were sleeping.

F. J. Horgan

He awakened Mrs. Horgan, and with her assistance, threw wraps around the children and carried them to safety.

He awakened Mrs. Horgan, and with her assistance, threw wraps around the children and carried them to safety.

Re-entering the smoke-filled house, Mr. Horgan telephoned fire headquarters and summoned aid. By the time firemen arrived, the fire, which caught from defective wiring, had gained dangerous headway, and was already burning the staircase leading to the second floor. The fire was extinguished before the second floor was extensively damaged.

Neighbors provided shelter for Mrs. Horgan and the seven children. Horgan, a staunch Democrat, ran in opposition to Congressman George H. Tinkham. He charged his opponent with corrupt practice.

WOUNDS MOTHER, KILLS HIMSELF

New York, April 26.—(By International News Service) "Mother" was the only sweetheart Joseph McGrath, a foreman of longshoremen, ever had. He always said so. Last Sunday she got up a wonderful dinner of strawberry shortcake and everything" for her "Joe" but Joe was late. They quarrelled, the first they ever had. It almost crushed the seventy year old lady and Joe felt even worse.

Joe came home last night, worried, crestfallen. Sunddenly he drew a gun and with "mother" holding her hands forth imploringly, shot her down.

Then he went to the bathroom and killed himself. Mother probably will die physicians said today.

Washington.—Secretary Mellon is considering a trip to Europe late this Summer and it is assumed he will discuss various financial questions with the statesmen of the allied nations.

TURKS YIELD TO FRANCE ON DEAL WITH CHESTER

Lausanne, April 26.—Turkey is prepared to withdraw some of the concessions granted to the Ottoman-American Development Company (the Chester group) in favor of the French upon certain conditions, it was learned in Near East peace conference circles today.

Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation, was understood to have notified General Pelle, head of the French delegation that there were reservation clauses in the Chester contract which would enable the Turks to give to France the concession for construction of the railway line to Samsun, a Black Sea port, and that the Turks were willing to do so on condition that France build the line at the figure proposed in 1914. The French declared the Turkish offer was not accepted.

It was learned a committee of French experts on concessions left Paris for Constantinople and Angora to discuss French interests with the Turks and to seek compensation for the Chester grant. The French assert that this grant contains rights originally awarded to France.

City Will Cart Off Anything From Bed to a Bureau

Anything you don't want, from a shoestring to a bed or an old dresser, will be hauled away by the city during the annual clean-up season, according to an announcement made by Public Works Commissioner Joseph A. Rourke.

Attics, cellars, yards, alleyways and other places where rubbish is prone to accumulate, may be cleared, and the debris placed on the curb, where it will be gathered up and hauled away in the 352 dump carts which the city has assigned for this purpose until May 15. Rubbish that is liable to blow away should be made into bundles.

UNCONSCIOUS 144 HOURS, PASSES AWAY

Lawrence, April 26.—Elderton Fisher, seventeen years old, of Cross street, East Somerville, died at the Lawrence General Hospital. He had been unconscious 144 hours since he suffered a fractured skull Patriots' Day. An automobile in which he and four others were riding, struck a telegraph pole at Andover.

SOUTH BOSTON GIRL REPORTED MISSING

Anna Griffin, sixteen years old, disappeared from her home Monday, No. 50 Gold street, South Boston. Her parents say she received a letter from a United States sailor previous to leaving home.

Anna Griffin.

The note has been turned over to the police. It is signed by Walter P. Flemming, United States Naval Hospital, Chelsea, and directed the girl to meet Flemming at the Commodore Hotel. The girl's parents believe that Flemming is responsible for her disappearance.

Anna was employed by the John T. Connor Stores. She is described as being five feet three inches tall, weighing 115 pounds, with dark brown bobbed hair, and brown eyes. She wore a light fawn colored coat and a purple hat.

LIEUT.-GOV. FULLER AFTER CHICK THIEVES

Exeter, N. H., April 26.—Lieutenant-Governor Alvan T. Fuller of Massachusetts has been named a deputy in a society of poultrymen of Rockingham County, which has been formed for the purpose of running down chicken thieves. The lieutenant-governor owns a large stock farm at Little Boar's Head. He was named deputy sheriff of Rye, the town in which his farm is located. There has been an epidemic of chicken stealing in the county that the owners felt it necessary to take drastic action.

ST. AUGUSTINE'S BAND CONCERT FOR AMERICAN'S BICYCLE OUTING

BIG TREAT IS PROMISED RIDERS

Boys' Musical Organization Always Make Hit Wherever They Play

A snappy concert will be given on Franklin Field Sunday afternoon, May 6, by St. Augustine's Cadet Band of 120 boy musicians, as one of the features of the Boston American's fourth annual bicycle carnival.

All the boys who comprise the band are members of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, of which Rev Fr. Joseph F. Coppinger is pastor. As a result of the keen interest taken in the boys by Fr. Coppinger their organization is one of the finest musical outfits in New England. Fr. Coppinger has been ably assisted by the Rev. Richard A. Burke, who is idolized by the boys because of what he has done for them.

ALWAYS MAKE HIT.

The field band, together with the 250 members of St. Augustine's Cadets, make a hit wherever they play. They play regularly at Fairs, bazaars and field days.

The cadets are in charge of Colonel Charles McGuire, Major William Flaherty and Major Ernest Dixon, while the band is in charge of Thomas Kane, drum major, and Lieutenant Patrick O'Donnell.

This is the third year the boys have been organized. Their clubhouse is situated in P street, South Boston, and contains reading room, pool room, rustic room and gymnasium. Boxing lessons are given by Joe Riordan, while military instruction is furnished by Lieutenant Nicholas A. Fleming, who was with the Yankee Division, and Sergeant Joseph Sullivan. The band instructor is Michael J. Devine, U. S. N., retired, who served for twenty years in the navy and for five years had charge of the government musical school at Newport, R. I.

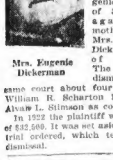
MANY ENTRIES FILED.

Realizing the need for proper recreation for boys Fr. Coppinger obtained a camp at Manomet for the cadets. It is an ideal place. Each of the boys will be given a two weeks' outing there, beginning early in July.

Entries for the carnival, parade and contests continue to arrive in every mail from nearly every city and town within fifty miles of Boston. The bicycle editor wishes to repeat that all that is necessary for anyone desiring to take part is clip the coupon from the Boston American, fill it out and send to "Bicycle Carnival Editor, Boston American, Boston (8) Mass."

NEW "SONNY BOY" LETTER TRIAL ASKED

The famous "Sonny Boy" love-letter case bobbed up again in the Superior Court in East Cambridge when Judge Joseph Walsh heard a motion for a new trial in the $100,000 alienation suit of Mrs. Eugenie Dickerman of Somerville against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman, also of Somerville. The case was dismissed in the same court about four weeks ago. William R. Scharton has replaced Alvah L. Stinson as counsel.



Mrs. Eugenie Dickerman

In 1922 the plaintiff won a verdict of $32,500. It was set aside and a new trial ordered, which terminated in dismissal.

B. THAW, JR., TO MARRY COUNTESS

New York, April 26.—Cholly Knickerbocker, in the New York American, announces the wedding of Consuele, Countess De Maupas, to Benjamin Thaw, Jr., son of Mrs. Benjamin Thaw of Pittsburgh, will take place May 8.

EXPOSE DRINKS AT HARVARD

to take up what he calls the seriousness of the liquor question.

At the executive offices of the institution no official word was forthcoming on Professor Hauser's revelations, if they are revelations, to the authorities.

LITTLE "DISORGANIZED."

In his prohibition article written for the French newspaper, Professor Hauser refers to the last cotillion ball and says why several young girls were not frightened by two, three, four cocktails. They were not drunk, but a little disorganized, he says.

He explained that his remarks in this respect were not based on personal observation, but on information from "several serious-minded persons."

The professor said that, in his opinion, prohibition in America would be more effective if wines and beer were allowed. He strongly endorses a ban on the more powerful spirits.

Young people, he says, drink intoxicating liquors just because they think it is the smart thing to do, now that it is under the ban.

HUMAN NATURE.

He points to places in his own France and other European countries where good wine is in copious quantities and easily obtained. In those places, he says, there are no alcoholics. In the places where good wine is not abundant one finds excessive drinking, alcoholics, drunkenness.

It's human nature to want and to have what is barred, the professor holds.

IN SHADE OF CAPITOL.

Hitting liquor raids in Washington, Professor Hauser remarks:

"How is it that yesterday, at Washington, the police seized at a great merchant's place not only a stock of spirits valued at $4,000, but a list of addresses—500 names, arranged alphabetically so far as the letter R—in which were included several officers, among them a half-dozen of the highest rank in the navy, and a great number of high rank in the army; six members of Congress, and several considerable personages of both sexes. The list was made public, and the people whose names begin with letters after R are very uneasy.

"The others say, and with reason, that a merchants can put on his lists people to whom he has sent a prospectus, and who are not necessarily clients. That is true. But the employes of that great merchant establishment admit that they handle about 200 cases of whiskey a week. In the capital of dry America, in the shade of the Capitol!"

DUKE WEDS IN ROYAL POMP

teen-foot train of ivory-colored net hung from her shoulders.

The Duke was dressed in the uniform of an officer of the Royal Air Force. King George wore the field uniform of a general, while Queen Mary's attire was a gown of blue and silver.

As the royal coach bearing the young couple trundled to Buckingham Palace between the lines of lavishly accoutred soldiers and officers of the Coldstream, Grenadier, Scots, Irish and Welsh guards, the vast assemblage of people could discern through the broad glass window of a vehicle far grander than Cinderella's the winsome features of the new Duchess. And, indeed, she seemed to meet their expectations of what a Princely bride should be.

OF ENGLISH ANCESTRY.

Those who have been happy in the belief that the Duke of York is marrying a Scotch girl received something of a shock this morning when they read in the Daily Express a statement by Arthur C. Fox Davies, the distinguished genealogist, that Lady Elizabeth is not Scotch, but English. Mr. Fox Davies traces the new Duchess' ancestry back to the first Duke of York, who was born in 1841, and from whom the present Duke of York is also descended.

George Harvey, the American Ambassador, was a striking figure in tight velvet knee breeches silk stockings and other court regalia, while Mrs. Harvey attracted wide attention in her gown of beige crepe with overdress of black lace and cape and vest of beige crepe embroidered in oriental colors. Her wore sable furs and a black crinoline hat trimmed with lace bows.

In all, nine American witnessed the ceremony. In addition to Ambassador and Mrs. Harvey these favored guests were seven American newspapermen.

WONDROUS TROUSSEAU.

At the last moment the bride added nineteen pairs of silver gold and silk slippers and sandals to her wondrous trousseau.

The Duke of York spent the last day of his single existence under the paternal roof discussing final details of the wedding with the King and Queen. Later he called on his sister, Princess Mary, and wished her many happy returns, for the day was her birthday, and inspected the house which he will occupy with his bride after their honeymoon.

The day was only less memorable for the Duke than his wedding day for the King honored him with the treasured order of the Thistle, which is held by only a score of other Britons, and he was appointed senior grand warden of the United Grand Lodge of Free Masons.

Duke and Bride Are Pelted With Rice by King and Queen

London, April 26.—The wedding of the Duke of York and his Scottish bride today was followed by a luncheon at which the gigantic wedding cake—it weighed 3,000 pounds—was cut. A piece went to each guest who made a wish before taking the first bite.

When the Duke and Duchess later left for the Waterloo Station, the King and Queen showered them with an avalanche of rice.

KING CHRISTIAN 25 YEARS WED

Copenhagen, April 26 (By the Associated Press).—The silver wedding anniversary of King Christian and Queen Alexandrine was celebrated today at Frendensborg Castle.

Here for the festivities were King Haakon, Queen Maud and Crown Prince Olaf of Norway; Prince Waldemar, King Christian's brother; Queen Alexandrine's sister, the former Crown Princess of Germany, and her children: the Duke and Duchess of Cumberland and many other illustrious personages.

Although the guests spent the day amid the sylvan charms of Frendensborg, twenty miles north of this city, the King and Queen motored here to receive at the Amelienborg Palace the various deputations who called to offer congratulations

FASCISTI CHIEFS FIGHT DUEL WITH SABRES

Rome, April 26 (By the Associated Press).—A duel with cavalry sabres was fought today by Deputy Giunta, secretary-general of the Grand Fascista Council, and Captain Forni, one of the military leaders of the Fascisti, resulting in the latter being so badly slashed that the attending doctors refused to permit the affair of honor to continue beyond the second round.

In the first round Deputy Giunta received a terrific blow in the abdomen, but as he managed partly to deflect his opponent's sabre he was struck with the flat of the weapon and escaped serious injury. In the second round both were wounded. Captain Forni in the face and right hand and Signor Giunta in the right arm.

Both the combatants insisted upon going on with the bout, but Captain Forni was bleeding so profusely that the doctors declared him in no position to continue on equal terms with his opponent and ordered the cessation of the duel.

The opponents refused to be reconciled, reserving the right to continue their quarrel, the nature of which was not made public.

PARENT-TEACHERS VOTE AGAINST WAR

Louisville, Ky., April 26.—The National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers' Association was on record today as favoring formation of some permanent organization to prevent war, promotion of peace and legislation to create uniform national marriage and divorce laws by resolutions to this effect adopted to the 27th annual convention in session here. Among the elected were Mrs. Pearl Remington, East Providence, R. I., fourth vice-president, and Mrs. George B. Chandler, Rocky

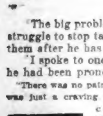
WILL POWER TO FIGHT DOPE HABIT A PROBLEM, SAYS JUANITA

REAL CRISIS IN BATTLE OF CONFIRMED ADDICT

By JUANITA HANSEN

"The big problem which confronts the drug addict is not the struggle to stop taking drugs. It is the struggle to avoid taking them after he has stopped.

"I spoke to one man yesterday who described his fight after he had been pronounced cured.



Juanita Hansen.

"There was no pain," he said. "It was just a craving. It seemed to center in my stomach. At first I thought it was hunger, and I would eat more than my usual rations. But that didn't stop the craving at all.

"I don't know how I can describe it to you. I knew it was not a normal craving. In some psychic way I realized that it was the voice of the drug, trying to tempt me. The craving was accompanied by nervousness, fatigue, restlessness.

"This stage is the real crisis of the fight a drug addict has to make.

"I knew that if I gave in I would be lost forever. I was tempted to have somebody bind me, hand and foot, so that it would be physically impossible for me to get any drugs to satisfy that craving. But I realized that this was not the proper method, because as long as the desire persisted I was in danger.

"So I fought that craving, not with medicine, but with mind. And I won."

Last July, after I had given up narcotics and gone South to my home, I was very careful of my associates and environment. I was most fortunate in having kind and loyal friends who believed in me and who shielded me from any possible contact with those who might awaken the old appetite.

TEMPTED AGAIN.

Then I went back to Hollywood. While there, I was the guest of a friend of mine in the foothills. A lawn party was given on the beautiful estate of this friend, who is a most charming host.

It was in the nature of a homecoming for me, as I had been away for the greater part of a year. It was a wonderful party, and everybody was most thoughtful. No reference was made to the fight I had made, but my appearance spoke volumes for the success of my struggle.

As I was leaving a young man I had met on several occasions, but whom I had never known well, said he and his wife would like very much to have me phone them sometime, and handed me a folded slip of paper which he said had his address and telephone number on it. I reached home about midnight and opened up the paper to see what the phone number was. I recognized the peculiar fold of the paper—the sign of the "bindle." I opened it hurriedly and could hardly believe my eyes when I saw some white powder in the paper. I recognized it at once as cocaine.

LOCKS "BINDLE" IN BAG.

I can't describe the whirlwind of emotion which overcame me. I didn't know whether to laugh or cry. I cannot say there was no temptation. There was. The stuff had come to me so suddenly, without warning. I took my traveling bag, emptied all the contents on the floor and placed the bindle of cocaine (it was only the size of a postage stamp) in the pocket of the bag. I closed the bag and locked it.

Presently the woman I was staying with came home. I asked her if she would stay up with me and she agreed, of course. I read my books until almost dawn and then we both retired.

In the morning I got the bag, opened it, got out the bindle of cocaine and looked at it.

Every day for a month I would do the same thing.

FOUGHT DESIRE.

I realized that destroying it would not be the proper thing to do. I wanted to know that it was at my side all the time, and that I had the strength of mind to withstand the temptation.

I kept that cocaine with me for weeks, until one day I simply forgot to open the bag. The bindle remained in the bag for several months after that.

It was only recently that I happened to come across that bag. I opened it up. There was the little packet. I opened it and stared at the white powder. There was absolutely no temptation to take the drug.

KNEW SHE HAD WON.

Then I knew I had won.

I took the powder and emptied it into the palm of my hand. I went to the window and placed the powder near my mouth.

For a second there came the terrible desire to take the stuff. My brain whirled. Then calmness settled over me.

I had won.

I blew the powder out of the palm of my hand and watched it as it floated away—to nothingness.

16 FIRE CHIEFS FOR DEDHAM AND CANTON

Dedham and Canton Fire Departments are prepared to stop the fire fiend in his tracks.

Dedham selectmen have appointed themselves to the Board of Fire Engineers. There were five engineers. The selection make three more engineers, or eight in all.

Dedham Fire Department has a rank and file personnel of twelve. A ratio of eight engineers to twelve men makes one and one-half man to an engineer.

Canton selectmen have reappointed the board of five engineers and added themselves to the list, making eight engineers for Canton.

Canton has a fire force of twenty men; twelve for Canton proper and eight for Ponkapoag. If all the engineers respond to a fire in Ponkapoag, there is an engineer to boss every man. For fires in Canton proper there is an engineer for every one and one-half men.

WOMAN, 98, DEAD IN PROVINCETOWN

Provincetown, April 26.—Mrs. Isabel MacKay, ninety-eight years old, and the oldest inhabitant of Provincetown, is dead at the home of her daughter on Commercial street. She had been in feeble health for several years. She leaves one son and five daughters.

ALICE IS CURED OF DESIRE TO END LIFE

She has taken the cold water cure for suicide and she says she is thoroughly cured.

"I'll never do it again. Life is worth living after all."

That's the more cheerful opinion held today by sixteen-year-old Alice Lemosh of No. 175 Bowen street, South Boston, as she thinks things over on her cot in City Hospital.

Meanwhile the nurses fuss with her and pet her because she is in their opinion, quite the prettiest bob-haired flapper they have seen there for months.

Alice was found wet and unconscious on the Strandway at the foot of I street by a policeman. She had been reported missing from home.

Today Alice told her story of her girlish troubles. She gave home treatment what is known in the slang of the day as the "raspberry." What her parents may have to say is one thing. What Alice says is this:

"I was discouraged. My pa and ma had been mean to me. They kept finding fault with me. I would go out to the movies in the evening. And, when I came home, they would tell me I had been out with the boys, which I hadn't.

"Then they wanted me to quit school and go to work and I wanted to stay in school. I go to the Norcross school on Fifth street.

"Well, I went walking along the Strandway and down at the foot of I street I waded out in the water up to my neck.

"It was awful cold and I turned around and waded back to shore. I walked along aways and then I fainted and the police brought me to the hospital.

"I'll never do it again."

BOY CHARGED WITH SHOOTING BROTHER

Bangor, April 26.—Jimmy Currie, fourteen years old, of Enfield, who shot his brother, Chester, eighteen years old, wounding him about the legs and in one hand with buckshot, appeared in Municipal Court. Chester told of a quarrel, but doubted his brother intended to kill him. He shot low. Jimmy, held on the charge of assault with intent to kill, was released in $1,000 bond.

Glass Bathing Suit Goes to Yale Student

New Haven, April 26.—The cut glass bathing suit this year goes to Maxwell E. Foster of Boston, announced in the Yale seniors' vote today as being the most scholarly youth of his class.

Mike Eddy, of Wellesley Hills, captain of the ball team, was voted the best all around athlete.

Other honors:

Handsomest man, James Pomery Hendrick of New York.

Most likely to succeed, Ellery S. Husted of Peekskill.

Best natured man, Harry Cross of Providence.

Other votes decided:

The favorite religion is Episcopalean.

Cleopatra is the favorite character in history.

"Crossing the Bar" is the favorite poem.

10-WEEKS TOUR FOR JUANITA HANSEN

Juanita Hansen, who is appearing in person in Boston this week, has been deluged with offers from various large cities throughout the United States requesting her personal appearance in these cities. Negotiations are in progress for a ten-weeks tour of the Middle West cities, starting at Chicago, Sunday, May 13, where Miss Hansen will appear in the larger motion picture theatres and deliver her lectures to thousands of persons daily in conjunction with a special motion picture play pertaining to the drug evil. For this tour Miss Hansen is to receive $25,000.

Concord, N. H.—President Harding's advocacy of American participation in the World Court of Arbitration is a good political move, Samuel W. McCall, former Governor of Massachusetts told the members of the New Hampshire Republican League meeting.

PHONE GIRLS TO PICK 'MISS MAIN' AT DANCE

The prettiest girl in the main telephone exchange will be selected tonight at a dance of the operators in that exchange, to be conducted in Catholic Union Hall, Worcester square. The judges will consist of Boston newspaper editors.

The girl who is chosen will be called "Miss Main" for the next twelve months. Proceeds of the party will be devoted to the sick benefit fund of the organization.

Billie McBride's Orchestra will play for general dancing, and Miss Katherine Tobin, one of the most popular girls in the exchange, will give an exhibition of ballroom steps with Howard Russell.

CLARA PHILLIPS, HAMMER SLAYER, WILL FIGHT EXTRADITION

POLICE OF HONDURAS HOLD HER IN HOTEL ROOM

Copyright by International News Service.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, April 26.—Clara Phillips, "hammer slayer," refuses to go back to California without a fight. She is in jail here and preparations are being made to take her back to Los Angelts, where she escaped from prison.

"I have refused to waive extradition," said the woman, who is known here as Mrs. Jesse Carsen, but who was known on the journey through Salvador as Mrs. R. M. Young.

"I will not say I am Clara Phillips, nor will I say I am not Clara Phillips. I am not going to say anything at all."

Clara Phillips.

SHOWS NO FRIGHT.

Neither she nor the woman who was arrested with her have shown any signs of fright. The man in the party, Jesse Carsen, lost his nerve and consented to return to Los Angeles without extradition papers. He is charged with arson. The three have been detained since their arrival last Saturday afternoon at the request of Franklin Morales, the American minister.

Mrs. Carsen, who is suspected of being Clara Phillips, is held in a typical tropical bedroom, 40x20 feet in size. There are four doors and two long windows. A policeman with a long rifle is posted at one of the doors and another is on duty downstairs.

The chief of police said that if the identity of the woman were established it would be necessary to hold her in prison, but so long as it is uncertain he had to detain her in better quarters. The chief is cautious in discussing the phase which has aroused more interest and excitement in this city than anything which has happened for a year.

"I hope," said the chief, "that a mistake has been made but I fear there is no question of the prisoner's real identity."

DESCRIPTIONS TALLY.

The description of Clara Phillips sent by the Honduran consul at Los Angeles fits "Mrs. Carsen" in every detail. She looks like newspaper photographs of the hammer murderess. Her crinkly hair is done up in a pompadour, her face is rather square and somewhat masculine. Her eyebrows are shaved and her eyes look directly and boldly into the eyes of anyone to whom she talks. She smiles easily and often, showing perfect white teeth. There is a wide scar on the upper lip.

The two women claim to be sisters but they are wholly unlike in appearance. "Mrs. Young" is slight in stature with blonde hair done up in a pompadour. She has prominent blue eyes and speaks with an accent slightly Germanic.

Carsen was greatly shocked by his arrest. His face turned ashen. But not so the women. They took the matter as a joke and bantered with the policemen.

The trio arrived April 19 from La Union, Salvador, in a private gasoline launch. They made the trip from Amapala to Tegucigalpa on a motor truck. It was a trip of eighty miles over mountains and through marshy jungles. The women sat on the seat with the driver, while Carsen clung to the freight in the bed of the truck. Carsen could have hired a special automobile for $75 but the party was by hard to economize. They carried with them three trunks and three suit cases. They went first to the American hotel, but remained only two days, going thence to a rooming house.

ALL-COLLEGE COSTUME BALL ON FRIDAY

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have Take Olive Tablets

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of users take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets as a regular substitute for calomel and then just to keep them fit. 10c and 30c.

NEAR EAST RELIEF

THE MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

The President of the United States in his proclamation for the relief of the suffering in the Near East has pointed out the almost unbelievable conditions existing among thousands of deported orphans and refugees, the latter old women and little children who are huddled on the bleak shores of the Aegean Sea, slowly dying of exposure.

These conditions having been brought to my attention in all their misery, I am moved to make an additional appeal to the citizens of Greater Boston for old clothing to help relieve in a measure some of this great distress.

I am convinced that the most of garments from Greater Boston will save thousands of these needy ones. Any clothing thus received will be distributed by the Near East Relief who are on the ground, designated for that work by Congress. I therefore appeal to the citizens of our city to look through their wardrobes and attics and select such garments as they can spare and bring the same to the fire and police stations nearest their residence. All these stations throughout the various sections of this city will be used as collection depots for the reception of bundles to help this worthy cause.

I further set forth Monday, the 30th of April, as Bundle Day in Greater Boston for the Near East Relief.

That the citizens of Greater Boston may be generous in their response to this crying appeal is my hope.

Husband Missing

MR. AND MRS. G. RUSSO.

The Dorchester bride of a few months cannot account for the disappearance of her husband who dropped out of sight on Summer street during a noon lunch hour.

MAN VANISHES IN NOON-HOUR CROWD

Boston police are mystified by the disappearance of a man who literally dropped out of sight on Summer street during a noon rush.

The man is Gruziano Russo, twenty-nine years old, No. 16 Greenwich street, Dorchester, for more than ten years an employe of a large down town clothing store.

With a fellow worker he had started for the restaurant where he is accustomed to take lunch. He was chatting, as usual. When his companion turned to answer him, Russo was not there. He has not been seen since.

Mrs. Josephine Russo, the young wife, could give no reason for her husband's disappearance. She declared there was no family trouble of any kind.

NOT FEELING WELL.

Russo is known to have been of nervous temperament. He has recently been under the care of a physician. Fellow employes recall he complained of not feeling well the morning he disappeared.

According to Mrs. Russo, he could not have had more than $10 in money and $100 in jewelry with him at the time of his disappearance.

Russo is five feet eight inches tall, medium build and medium complexioned. There is a scar on his right cheek. On the day of his disappearance, he wore a grey suit, grey overcoat, striped necktie, green fedora hat and black patent leather shoes.

BRIDE OF FEW MONTHS.

"I can't imagine what has happened to him," his bride of a few months said. "He has been a very good husband, and we never had any trouble.

"Neither his relatives nor my own know why he left—that is, if he went away of his own accord."

VATICAN COURIER SEIZED BY SOVIETS

Riga, April 26 — Soviet aurorities held up on the Russian frontier Father Simonetti, courier of the Vatican delegation at Moscow, and seized the Pope's mail, Professor Edmund Walsh, a member of the Vatican delegation, protested to Foreign Minister Tchitcherin.

Heroines at Fire

VALOR WINS PRAISE.

LAUD HOSPITAL PHONE GIRLS FOR HEROISM

"Good work, girls!"

That was the summary of praise at City Hospital today for Miss Mary Tuohey, Miss Dorothy Curtin and Miss Mary V. Alemi, operators of the hospital's big telephone switchboard, and heroines of a fire emergency.

When fumes of burning celluloid from a fire in the storeroom of the X-Ray department entered the telephone room the two operators stuck to their switchboard, notified all the wards that there was a fire but no danger and thus averted any panic that might have arisen among patients.

Miss Tuohey sounded an alarm from Box 1663, located in the telephone office. This brought emergency apparatus under District Chief Fox, rescue companies and police ambulances, in case removal of patients was necessary.

Nurses prepared to move patients but the fire was extinguished before actual removals were required.

Valuable medical records on X ray plates were destroyed.

PHILADELPHIA SHIP GROUNDS IN PACIFIC

San Francisco, April 26.—Wireless stations today picked up S. O. S. calls from the 5,543-ton Shipping Board cargo steamer Brush, in distress off Cape Arga. The Brush, with a crew of forty-two, sailed from Aberdeen, Wash., for San Francisco last night. Philadelphia is her home port.

Later a radio was received stating the steamer was hard aground and "breaking up fast." The steamer Admiral Fiske has gone to her aid.

100 Policemen Quit Funeral Cortege to Chase Thief

New York, April 26.—When a purse snatcher robbed one of the mourners and fled, 100 policemen and detectives marching in the funeral procession of the late Detective Sergeant Francis Baker left the cortege and joined in the pursuit.

The thief was captured after a chase of several blocks.

Giving the soldiers land isn't as important as helping in successful management.

A SYSTEM has been discovered that makes it possible by a new arrangement of the alphabet to send radio, cable and telegraph messages at double speed. That is still ridiculously slow. That the speed of lightning should be limited by the speed of an operator's fingers is preposterous.

The telegraph line that now carries a thousand words an hour could just as well carry two hundred thousand or a million words, if the speed of electricity were applied, as it might be applied in sending messages by feeding perforated messages to a sending machine or otherwise.

RUHR WORKERS IN UGLY MOOD; 2 KILLED

Cologne, April 26. — The attitude of the unemployed in the Ruhr continues to be menacing. Disturbances are feared in many sections.

The situation is said to be particularly serious at Kartenburg where outbreaks are momentarily expected.

There was a fracas between intruders at Essen and the German police. Two men are reported to have been killed.

Dispatches state that further outbreaks are imminent at Mulheim, the headquarters of Hugo Stinnes, where the town hall was stormed by the unemployed.

Berlin—At the annual meeting of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company May 15 a proposal will be made to increase the capital stock to 1,000,000,000 marks. It is now 600,000,000 marks.

BOSTON-MONTANA OFFICIALS AMONG LOSERS

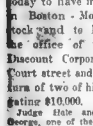
JUDGE HALE REPORTED VICTIM

Walpole Justice Declared $80,000 Investor—Demands Return of Notes

By BERT FORD.

Judge Cornelius E. Hale of Walpole, associate justice in Norfolk county, was reported today to have invested $80,000 in Boston - Montana mining stock and to have gone to the office of the American Discount Corporation, No. 40 Court street and demanded return of two of his notes aggregating $10,000.

Judge Hale and William Lee George, one of the officials of the company, exchanged heated words. Finally the situation became so acute that Mr George ordered Judge Hale from the office. Then Mr George hastened to the Court House to tell District Attorney Thomas C O'Brien just what had happened between him and Judge Hale.



J. H. Burnham

It was explained that Judge Hale had borrowed $10,000 on two notes for $5,000 each and had only paid back $1,000, according to the claims of the officials of the American Discount Corporation. Judge Hale was quoted as having admitted that he had put all his money into Boston-Montana, through President William R. Allen.

Judge Hale is said to have threatened to sue Allen for recovery of his money. Mr. George told Judge Hale that he had no authority to surrender notes that had not been paid as they constituted assets of the corporation. Mr. George told District Attorney O'Brien that Judge Hale's demand was a direct result of indictments against him and four other officials of the American Discount Corporation.

SELF MADE MAN.

Judge Hale is forty-seven years of age and prominent in Walpole. He worked his way up from mill boy, railroad tower man and telegrapher to district judge, studying law nights by lamplight. He has been a selectman and president of the Walpole Board of Trade. He had a law office at North Attleboro.

Some of the indicted officials of the American Discount Corporation suffered personal loss by the collapse of Boston-Montana. Investigation showed that neither W. Robert Montgomery nor any of the others ever made a dollar out of the stock. Officials of the company said that the only official of Boston-Montana Corporation who had ever been an officer of the American Discount Corporation was President Allen who served for a time on a director.

Charles T. Crowley, a prominent business man of Fitchburg is said to have invested close to $100,000 in the eighteen indicted.

William J. Barrow, vice-president of Boston-Montana Corporation, is reported to have dropped $20,000. He is also indicted.

Boutwell Brothers of Boston are said to have invested $50,000. Dr. Fred S. Thorne and family of Brookline are said to have subscribed $100,000.

Albert E. Orr of Worcester is said to have invested between $30,000 and $100,000.

E. P. Platt of Providence is reported to have invested between $50,000 and $100,000.

POLITICIANS LOST.

A number of Boston politicians are known to have lost heavily.

Harry G. Porch, one of the indicted men, lost a tidy sum of his own money.

F. C. Stowell of Boston invested liberally.

President Allen of Montana staged a series of dinners at Boston City Club. Public officials and business and professional men considered likely investors were invited. The largest and most brilliant gathering was held at Boston City Club on the night of January 18, 1922. Former Attorney-General Thomas J. Boynton was toastmaster. It was at that dinner that Vice-President Calvin Coolidge eulogized President Allen and his enterprise. Allen swung Montana for Coolidge in the national election and named a mining town for him.

President Allen, breezy and magnetic, was given an ovation and painted a graphic word picture of the prospects for sure-fire wealth. Exactly $253,000 was subscribed for Boston-Montana mining stock at the grand affair. The records show that 425 attended—bankers, brokers, lawyers, doctors, merchants, manufacturers and politicians. There are many aching hearts today among those who were the guests of "Bill" Allen and his colleagues that night.

STARTED OUT RIGHT.

Sympathy is expressed for Allen in financial circles of Boston. It is said that "Bill" started out right, but that the lure of the ticker and curb proved his downfall. Warren N. Withington, Boston stock broker, claims Allen is indebted to him for $20,000 on checks.

Allen's friends claim these were legal transactions, as the checks were predated and used virtually as promissory notes with pledges to pay a bonus. Allen is accused of having swapped these predated notes and real estate options with cash received for other notes and so on, in a sort of endless chain process.

The alleged check kiting is said to be one of the chief charges against Allen.

Hamilton B. Wills, head of Hamilton B. Wills Company, Ltd., New York and Toronto, came from Canada to be arraigned. He was accompanied by his personal counsel, Attorney R. H. Greer of Toronto. With Wills was arraigned his business agent, Frank Sullivan, of Hotel Westminster. Sullivan was represented by Attorney Howard A. Wyzanski.

John H. Burnham, a Boston broker, who lives in Higham, another of the indicted, pleaded guilty. Also arraigned also Attorney Alfred R. Lowney appeared for him. Wills, Sullivan and Burnham entered pleas of not guilty to the conspiracy charges and were allowed to go on their personal recognizance.

In Row Over Notes

JUDGE C. E. HALE.

Reported $80,000 investor in Boston-Montana mining stock and seeking return of notes from financier concerns.

CECIL ARGUES LEAGUE ALONE CAN STOP WAR

"The League of Nations is a great success now, and no matter what happens, it will continue to be a success," Lord Robert Cecil of England assured a large gathering in Symphony Hall.

The League, with no coercive power and relying only on publicity to gain its ends, he argued, was the only hope of preventing another great war, "which would destroy us all."

Lord Cecil, introduced by President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard spoke under the auspices of the Foreign Policy Association, the League of Nations Non-Partisan Association and the World Peace Foundation.

BY PUBLIC OPINION.

"Public opinion is a governing force among nations. It is the purpose of the League of Nations to have public opinion," Lord Cecil explained.

"The agency for carrying out the covenant is public opinion and publicity. With newspaper reporters present at three meetings, a nation will hesitate to put forth something selfish and dishonorable.

TO PREVENT WARS.

"The big object of the League of Nations is to prevent wars being rushed into without due deliberation and delay. The League isn't there to make compulsory decisions, nor has it any coercive powers.

"If you will read carefully the covenant—the document itself and not only what other people say about it—you will see that the whole purpose, the essential purpose, of the League is not to force its decisions on the world, but is purely and simply an organization with advisory powers only and not with coercive powers."

WNAC ASKS FAIR TRIAL OF SHORT WAVE

To those radio fans who have reported difficulty in picking up WNAC, the Shepard Stores station, since they changed to 286 meters, it is announced that the station is still experimenting with antenna and broadcasting equipment in order to insure a good reception as before. Co-operation in using more care in tuning for the new wave, which is much sharper and therefore easily missed, will assist in making possible a fair test. If the receiving antenna is more than a hundred feet long, a variable condensey of from .00025 to .0005 mfd capacity should be used in series with it. If after fair trial the new wave is not found better than the old, the station will go back to 360 meters.

House Committee Solidly Opposes More Money for Medical Examiner

Dr. George Burgess Magrath's plea for a chance to spend more of the public's money has been turned down again by the Legislative Committee on Counties.

This is the third rebuff suffered by the County medical examiner. He was turned down by the Legislative Committee on Public Service, not one of its members voting for his salary-grab bill.

The Committee on Counties then turned him down.

The busy doctor got his bill sent back to the Counties Committee for another hearing.

Since that time the doctor has put in hours of perfectly good time, for which the people are paying him, in the State House lobby button-holing members of the House to give him more of the public money to spend.

Chorus Girls Fight Blaze on Roof in Costume

New York, April 26.—A score of chorus girls in costume fought a brisk fire on the roof of the Winter Garden while crowds on Broadway stood and cheered.

Organizing a bucket brigade, the girls quickly quenched the flames, which started from a pot of tar.

By the time the firemen arrived they found nothing to do.

SOPRANO DERIDES WALSKA

Mme. Meluis, Whose Manager Left Her for Pole, Issues Voice Test Challenge

By HARRY A. BENWELL.

Harold McCorm'k's money and not Ganna Walska's voice, induced Jules Daiver to break his contract as manager of Mme. Luella Meluis, famous coloratura soprano.

At least that was the explanation given the Boston American by Mme. Meluis, who is suing Daiver for $100,000, claiming breach of contract.

Furthermore, to prove her contention, the fair Luella challenged Ganna to meet her on the concert platforms and may the best man-er-woman win.

"I think," said Mme. Meluis, "it is fully evident to Americans before whom Walska has appeared, that Daiver was actuated by a spirit of commercialism when he became her manager.

PUBLIC TO JUDGE.

"I have been booked for nearly 100 appearances in Europe, and if Walska does what she says she is going to do we will meet frequently. That is all I ask. The audiences will decide who is the real singer."

The golden haired song bird gives the first of her Patti memorial concerts at Symphony Hall Sunday night.

"He originally signed a contract to manage me exclusively in this country on a sliding scale totalling about $140,000," she continued. "I was to receive $1,000 an appearance for the first year, $2,000 the second year and so on for five years.

"He brought me to this country. Then came the news of Walska's impending marriage. Daiver was assistant manager of the Chicago Opera Company for ten years, and knew Mr. McCormick well.

"Without a word to me he hurried to Europe and invaded Mr. McCormick into giving him a contract to manage Walska in this country. Unquestionably he was given a lump sum, and also unquestionably it was plenty.

"I, of course, refused to appear under the same management as Walska, and brought suit. I obtained one of the few injunctions ever secured against an artist, preventing Walska from singing while under Daiver's management. The case is on the list in the New York courts and will come up before long."

SUING EX-MANAGER FOR $100,000

MME. LUELLA MELUIS

Coloratura soprano, now in Boston, declares Harold McCormack's gold induced Jules Daiver to break her contract to manage her in favor of Ganna Walska. Her suit for $100,000 damages goes to trial soon.

$200,000 VET, 84, SEEKS BRIDE, 21

New Bedford, April 26.—From a long to wed the prettiest twenty-one-year-old girl who will have him, Alfred Boardman, eighty-four-year-old War veteran and heir to $200,000, left here for Meredith, N. H., after having A. P. Pedestred appointed as conservator of his estate.

A year ago when he announced his intention to marry a twenty-one-year-old girl, friends had authorities appoint a conservator.

"Now that I am free of my conservator I'm going to marry some twenty-one-year-old girl," said Boardman.

POLICEMAN RISKS LIFE TO STOP HORSE

A daring lunge at a runaway horse owned by John Murphy of Northampton street, South End, by Patrolman Frank T. Cahill of the Dudley street police station, almost resulted in serious injury to the latter. Standing on Dale street, Roxbury, the horse was frightened by pupils from the Julia Ward Howe School, who were passing in the street. Sighting the horse as he bolted down Dale street, Patrolman Cahill leaped for the bridle, which broke, and threw him to the ground. He arose and chased the fleeing animal, finally capturing him.

FAIRBANKS BANS STAGE FOR SON

"Doug's" Protest of Film Career for Boy Ignored by His Divorced Wife

By BASIL D. WOON, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, April 26.—Douglas Fairbanks is fighting to prevent his son, Douglas, Jr., from becoming a movie star, it was learned here today.

In February it was stated that young Douglas, who is thirteen years old, was forming his own film company under direction of William Elliott. The boy's mother, Mrs. J. E. Evans, received a peremptory cable from Fairbanks demanding that the plans be cancelled and also asserting: "Douglas Fairbanks' son will have sufficient money to live on without working in the movies."

Mrs. Evans replied that her son's education is proceeding as usual and would not be interfered with by his work in the films. She refused to cancel Elliott's contract.

Sailing for New York on the Homeric, Elliott admitted that Fairbanks, Sr., is placing obstacles in the way of his son's picture career, and confirmed that young "Doug" is sailing for New York next Wednesday. He will make two pictures in New York in spite of his father's orders.

AMERICAN ACTRESS TO GO UNDER KNIFE

She came to Paris to buy costumes for a London production and became ill. The doctors report her condition is not dangerous. Arthur Hopkins has left here for Budapest. Billy Hallam, well known actor, arrived here with Jay Kaufman on the first lap of their tour around the world. A Very Hopwood is returning to New York next week.

"Poppy Peril"

By LAUCHLIN JAMES

BEGIN THIS STORY NOW

Two days after Kerry Rowan, a noted motion picture director, had visited the offices of the District Attorney in Los Angeles Rowan is found shot to death in his home, with a bowl of poppies scattered on the floor beside him. Rowan has given much information whereby the drug evil in Hollywood might be attacked and had promised to risk death by testifying against those caught in raids, for the sake of a clean Hollywood and because of his sincere affection for a young film star. Then, swing back to Ireland years earlier, where we meet Kenneth Royce, just out of college, who goes to China as secretary to Sir Charles Aylsmere. Here he visits opium dens. He meets Lily Waite and is warned against her. He is transferred to India.

Cards and Poppies

"WHEN I meet your frankness half way," said McShane, "if by being very fond of her you mean that you have any notion of asking her to be your wife, I'd say that was a matter in which you had best proceed very slowly. Professional ethics prevent me from saying anything further than that. Just remember that what I've said is meant in the kindest way, both for you and for her," nor would he add another syllable to the few words of caution he had already spoken.

As might have been expected, this singular warning served only to increase Royce's interest in Lily Waite.

He called more frequently than ever, a course in which he could not but feel the young lady gave him every encouragement. He seldom found her alone of an evening, for she had other admirers in plenty, and the parlor of her father's home rarely held less than four or five young officers from various branches of the service or minor attaches belonging to the entourage of the Lieutenant-Governor.

Lily's widowed father, Bertram Waite, was always present upon such evenings, and, in Royce's opinion, added little or nothing to the pleasure of the occasion. He was an insignificant person, who strove to cover his insignificance with an unremitting display of boisterous good-fellowship. This attitude was so palpably assumed and so feverishly executed that, try as he would, Royce could not like the man.

Waite was woefully lacking in resources, it appeared, and whenever the conversation showed the faintest signs of sagging his unvarying suggestion was that everybody should gather around the table in the dining room and start a game of cards.

Crooked Cards

These games always started with stakes that were harmless enough, and Royce joined in them as a matter of course, but in time he observed that the stakes had a way of creeping up as the evening progressed until the play was stiffer than most of the young men present could afford. Furthermore, he noticed that their host invariably won.

Thanks to the art of old Phil Cronin, who had seemed acquainted with all the games of chance the wide world had to offer, Royce had received a youthful training with the cards which now enabled him to protect himself quite easily. He never lost any considerable amount and quite frequently he quit ahead of the game, but there were others who were not so fortunate. Presently it became a matter of speculation with Royce as to whether certain of the players came to the Waite home to call upon Lily or to win back, if possible, some of the money they had lost to her father. He did not like the look of it, but so long as the play seemed devoid of chicanery he wisely decided that if his rivals for the smiles o' the daughter of the household chose to lose their money in that fashion it was distinctly their own affair.

One evening, however, he saw something that caused him to change his mind. Old Phil's skill at cards had included a knowledge of several dubious dodges invented for the purpose of influencing fortune in the favor of the one who employed them. These devices, as Cronin had carefully explained to his pupil, were not, of course, the sort to which a gentleman would ever stoop, but he had found them useful, nay, even essential,

CHARGE WILSON RAN OUT WHEN GANS REFUSED TO FAKE

CLAIM OF BAD ANKLE IS RIDICULED

By JACK CONWAY

Johnny Wilson, world's middleweight champion, quit out of his bout with Italian Joe Gans in Chicago because the latter refused to fake the contest, according to a story published in the Chicago Tribune.

Johnny Wilson

Wilson left Chicago a few hours before the match. He claimed he had injured an ankle training and that he was not physically fit to go through with his ring engagement.

The Chicago Tribune's story states that the rail birds who watched Wilson train did not notice the champion getting injured at any time.

Gans is far from being a champion, but he is a terrific puncher. He would probably knock Wilson out if he hit him on the jaw with a right-hand punch.

When Wilson was under the management of Marty Killilea he was offered a bout with Gans by the Arena A. C. The offer was turned down on the ground that Gans was too stiff a puncher for the champion to meet in his first start after a long layoff.

When it was announced that Wilson was to meet Gans in Chicago, Boston fans who knew of the champion's refusal to battle Gans here speculated on the chance of heart on the titleholder's part. Then came the news from the Windy City that Wilson had walked out on the promoters a few hours before the contest.

Wilson, according to reliable information, is managed by persons influential in New York race track circles. These gentlemen are out to protect the champion at least until they have got back the money they paid Killilea for his interest in Wilson's contract.

Johnny Wilson, middleweight champion, who was scheduled to meet Italian Joe Gans in one of the feature bouts of the boxing show at the Coliseum last night, left suddenly for New York in the afternoon at 12:40 o'clock. The champion merely sent word to promoters that he had injured his ankle and would be unable to go through with the engagement.

The champion worked at Ferretti's Sunday, and, according to the railbirds who saw the workout, left the gym without a limp. He did not do any work yesterday morning, according to other eastern boxers.

Following his sudden departure many ugly stories traveled up and down the fight rialto. One was that he tried to fix the fight with Gans and another was to the effect that he was not satisfied with his condition and rather than make a poor showing boarded the rattler for New York.

As soon as the promoters were told of Wilson's departure, they secured Henry Mckear of St. Louis. Despite the substitution, promoters asserted the change did not hurt the advance sale to any considerable extent. The remainder of the card remained as announced.

PADGETT LAUGHS AT OUR MOUNTED POLICE

By RINGSIDE.

"The Boston mounted police do not know how to ride. They look more like novices in a riding school class than the daring riders they are cracked up as being."

Cowboy Padgett

Thus spoke Cowboy Padgett, Western welterweight, who meets Eddie Shevlin at the Arena A. C. next Monday night, as he watched two of the members of the mounted force pilot their steeds through the Fenway.

"I have been watching your mounted police since I arrived in Boston," continued Padgett, "and I haven't seen a man who really knows how to ride a horse. They certainly look very handsome as they sit upon their horses at a cross street and bow to the fair ones who pass. But once the horse gets into motion and threatens to display a little bit of life, it is a different story.

"You then realize why the Westerners call some of your so-called daring horsemen tenderfoots. They are show window riders, not the dashing, reckless kind who do big things.

"I intend to offer my services to Superintendent of Police Crowley. While in Boston, I shall be glad to show your Boston police how to ride a horse."

That's that!

This writer does not claim to be a judge of horsemanship, but we should think that there would be some member of our police force who would step forth and challenge Padgett to a test of skill. This would be the best way to call the Westerner's bluff if he hasn't got the true low down on our mounted police.

* * *

Padgett apparently would welcome such a challenge. When the matter was mentioned to him, he said he would like to have a part of such a contest include a race up the State House steps.

"Anybody can ride a horse along level ground," said Padgett. "I would like to go up the State House steps on a gallop and pay my respects to Governor Cox."

Apparently the next move is up to our Mounted Police.

Padgett has won favor with the fans who have seen him action of Kelly & Hayes' gym. He is an aggressive, two-handed fighter. It is easy to see how he held Dave Shade to a draw and made things so interesting for Jack Britton.

Padgett plans to direct his attack to Shevlin's body. He believes that in this way he will gain the victory.

YALE WINNER FROM WESLEYAN IN TENTH

New Haven, Ct., April 26.—Eddie Sulzman, intercollegiate basketball star, made a dramatic advent into intercollegiate baseball today when he was sent into the Yale-Wesleyan match in the 10th inning with the count tied at three runs and with runners on first and second, he cracked the first offering of Pitcher Moore for a stinging single to centre, and drove Hawks to the plate with the run that won for Yale, 4 to 3.

ENGINEERS PLAN SATURDAY MEET

The Northeastern Engineers will engage in a dual track meet with New Hampshire State College at Durham, N. H., on Saturday.

Coaches Zeller and Parsons have been busy whipping the Boston men into shape for outdoor work and expect to take a fast team to oppose the New Hampshire boys.

This will be the only outdoor dual meet in which the Northeastern team will engage this season.

Men will be entered in various meets during the Spring, and a large squad will be sent to the Eastern Intercollegiates.

The Engineers expect to be strong in the dashes with J. H. Torrey toeing the mark and in the half, with W. V. Parsons as their main reliance. C. C. Brooks should be a star in the dashes, javelin throw and sprints.

The chief weakness of the Black and Red track team will be in the broad jump and the pole vault and two-mile runs.

AMHERST DEFEATS TRINITY 8 TO 0

Amherst, April 26.—Amherst defeated Trinity 8 to 0. Turk, Trinity pitcher, was batted from the box in the third inning. McKnight replaced him, allowed one hit in the innings. Joe Leete gave Amherst only three hits and struck out nine men. Woodruff's great throw from centre field cut off only threatening Trinity run at the plate.

VERMONT DEFEATS MAINE UNIVERSITY

Burlington, Vt., April 26.—In a typical cold weather ball game, the University of Vermont defeated the University of Maine 8 to 0. Vermont led during the entire contest, and made the game safe in the first inning when it scored five runs.

Lay Off Negro Bouts, Conway Warns Fans

By JACK CONWAY.

Our idea of nothing at all is trying to pick the winner of a boxing match in which two negro warriors are the principals. The evidence:

This writer has picked fifty-five winners out of a possible sixty-four this year. Three of our losses occurred when negro boxers were in the feature bouts.

George Robinson defeated Lee Anderson when the dope said Anderson should have won easily.

Battling McCreary won over Robinson when the records of past performances pointed to a Robinson victory.

McCreary won a decision over Kid Norfolk when the records of the two men indicated that McCreary would be lucky to last the ten rounds.

It is difficult for colored boxers to get matches. They have been known to toss bouts so as to get return dates.

There are two common ways to throw a fight. One is to intentionally fake. The other is to enter the ring in such poor physical condition that it is impossible to win. The boxer who adopts the latter method is as much of a faker as the one who deliberately takes a dive.

Our tip to fans who like to make a wager on fistic bouts is to lay off when two negroes meet.

ZBYSZKO AND CALZA IN BIG MAT BOUT TONIGHT

Wladek Zbyszko

For more than a year Zbyszko has been hurling all kinds of cruel shots at Calza. He has termed the Italian several dozen different kind of quitters.

After the waving of a flock of Liberty bonds, Calza and Zbyszko were finally matched. Each wrestler has prepared himself carefully for the contest, as the winner will be in line for some attractive bookings, while the loser will be out in left field as far as prestige is concerned.

Zbyszko has agreed to toss Calza three times in an hour of actual wrestling time. Intermissions will not be counted.

This is quite an assignment. Calza is one of the strongest grapplers in the world. He gave a demonstration of his tremendous strength when, after more than two hours of gruelling milling, he tossed George Kotsonares over his head and out of the ring in their recent bout.

Calza, like most Italians, would rather be termed most anything than a coward. As a result, he is bitter against Zbyszko and says he will give the Pole the roughest sessions he has ever experienced.

The Italian champion plans to force the issue from the start. He says in this way he will be able to score a fall quickly.

There is great interest in the match on account of the prominence of the wrestlers and the rivalry between them. A capacity crowd is expected to turn out to witness festivities.

* * *

Tommy Record, New England welterweight champion, will have Ed Sargeant as an opponent in a one-fall match to a finish. Lawson Pitcham of Attleboro will try conclusions with Frank Hackenschmidt, the new Hercules, in another finish affair.

Sam Smith, as usual, will have charge of affairs within the ring.

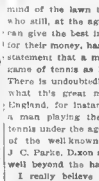
Jack Conway says:

"Wladek Zbyszko is a great wrestler, but I don't believe that Zbyszko, or anybody else for that matter can toss Calza three times in an hour. In fact, Calza is likely to secure a fall himself within an hour. Tonight's bout should result in a victory for the Italian."

Tennis as a Major Sport Recognized by Colleges

By VINCENT RICHARDS,
National Indoor Singles Champion.



How often have I heard the cry, "I wish I had taken up the game of lawn tennis while I was at college." Many a man who is a star at football, baseball and the other various college sports realizes shortly after he leaves college that it is practically impossible for him to derive any exercise from these great sports.

It is almost impossible for a business man to play either football or baseball. In the first place, in order to play them he must have at least a half dozen associates, and in the second place very few men can spare the time off from a pressing enterprise to play his favorite pastime.

Now that the lawn tennis game has taken a place among the various institutions of learning throughout the country, the youth of the land is beginning to realize the ability to play the game long after he leaves his university. In most of the colleges lawn tennis is a "major" sport. No greater tribute could be paid this game than to make it the leader in the different institutions of learning.

Norman E. Brooks, the master mind of the lawn tennis world and who still, at the age of forty years, can give the best in the land a run for their money, has often made the statement that a man can play the game of tennis as long as he lives. There is undoubtedly many truth in what this great master says. In England, for instance, there is not a man playing the game of lawn tennis under the age of thirty. Some of the well known stars, such as J. C. Parke, Dixon and G. Lowe, are well beyond the half century mark.

I really believe that the day is coming when the various universities throughout the land will be seeking professional instructors in the game of lawn tennis, just as they are in the other fields of athletics at the present time. The same condition will probably exist in the game of golf. Recently the athletic authorities at Yale University granted leave from his studies to Jesse Sweetser, the noted golf player. This in itself is a great tribute to the golf game.

Within the next five or six years both tennis and golf will predominate in the various universities. They are both "major" sports in almost every college at the present time and their popularity should increase tremendously, as the student body begins to take them up seriously.

It is well that the athletic authorities at the various universities realize the importance of making these two great games "major" sports because it is to our colleges that we must look for our future Davis Cup stars, such as Tilden and Johnston, and also our future golf champions, such as Sweetser, Jones and Chick Evans.

FORGE VILLAGE BIG SOCCER CENTRE

By ART CURLY.

Forge Village, although difficult to locate on a Massachusetts map, had developed into one of the foremost soccer centres in the State, and the fans there certainly get enough football, for their pitch, which is one of the nicest playing surfaces in the East, is never idle. When the Abbot Worsted first team is away a good match is staged by either the Junior or Juveniles.

The Junior team, made up of strictly amateur players, boys who have lived and worked in the district for years, is fast gaining a fine reputation under the expert guidance of Manager Johnny Young who recently led the boys to a well earned win over the St. George A. A. in the National Amateur Cup series, but were unfortunate enough to lose out to Roxbury by a close margin.

Pete Farquhar, a younger brother of the well known Jimmy of the first team, who, it will be remembered, made a fine start with the strong Braintree Welfare team, two seasons ago, is without a doubt the best player on the team, and is developing so fast as a centre half back that he is sure to get a trial with the big team next season.

John McKniff, better known as "Lega," can play either back or forward with the best of them, and "Tee Wee" Kavanaugh, who looks more like a mosquito than a football player, makes up in headwork for what he lacks in height. Joe Costello and Dick Lund make up a full back combination that is hard to beat, and play in perfect harmony with Jimmy Holmes, the guardian of the uprights.

Joe Blair plays a good game in any position to which he is assigned. He is the rover of the team and can be found in the forward line as often as on the defense. Douglas, Melia, Cooney, Milot and Connors are all likely members of the team who will make their place in fast company in the near future.

SUGGS IS VICTOR IN CLOSE BOUT

Fall River, April 26.—At the Casino A. A. Chick Suggs won a very close decision over Alec Fried man, the New England bantamweight champion, in a fast ten-round bout.

The New England title did not go with the decision, as Suggs was two pounds overweight.

It was a fast battle throughout and many of the fans thought that Friedman was entitled to the decision.

WOMEN SWIM RACES HELD FRIDAY NIGHT

The fifth meet of the Women's Swimming Association of New England will be held at the Brockton Y. W. C. A. tomorrow evening.

One of the important features of this meet will be the breast stroke competition to emphasize the desirability of this stroke in life-saving.

For the first time a 50-yard handicap race will be held to encourage those who have not been able to win before in the scratch races, and the other events consist of a 20 yard dash, 40-yard back stroke, plunge and a relay race, in addition to which one of the interesting features will be a life-saving exhibition.

AMERICAN GOLFERS VISIT SUNNINGALE

London, April 26.—All the American golfers with the exception of Quimet and Sweetser, visited Sunningdale, and participated in two four ball matches.

CHECKER EXPERT TO GIVE EXHIBITION

Tonight, at the rooms of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, Huntington avenue, S. S. Bell, a well known expert, will give a simultaneous checker exhibition. It is the wish of the management that twenty-five boards be played. A special effort is to be made to have Christy Mathewson, now president of the Braves, act as referee.

Annually the physical education department of the University of California holds tests for the "perfect man."

This year George S. Reed was the winner—only two points off a perfect score and four points better than any other previous "super man."

There are five determining events—Boxing, 100-yard dash, broad jump, 20-yard swimming sprint and 15-yard rescue swimming event.

Reed scored perfectly in all but the 20-yard swim, in which he was two points off.

MICKEY WALKER IS IN GOOD GRACES

New York, April 26.—Mickey Walker, the world's welterweight champion, is now back in the good graces of the Boxing Commission. Also, it must not be overlooked that his erstwhile manager, Jack Bulger, is once more within the fold.

Mickey Walker.

Jack was not fled that he was once more one of the regulars and the same glad news was furnished Michael Walker.

This means that Michael will be able to box here, if he cares to, and can do some slamming in his native State of New Jersey. The fact that he was considered "outside" so worried Bulger that he took to his bed.

of pastimes in the last ditch. And a fighting ball club will always give the fan a thrill, no matter how often it gets licked.

Fans Will See Several New Men Wearing Colors

Many a new face on the Red Sox was to be the target of fan eyes. The boys all wanted to see Howard Shanks, the slim blonde twirler from the Tigers. Howard couldn't get along with Ty Cobb, but he should be a great pitcher with Chance, who knows just how to handle his type.

Another Howard, Shanks, late of Washington, also will get the interest up and down. He battled his way into a regular job at second base and has been hitting the ball. And he always has been popular with the Fenway flocks.

Archer DeVormer, likewise, is in for plenty of applause, for he is hitting the ball harder than any of his mates, and proving to be the real backstop the experts predicted had he ever been given a chance with the Yankees.

A lot of the new near regulars will get the well known glad hand also along with their Peerless Leader, and perhaps the joyous reception will spur the team on to great things.

It must get started soon, or last summer will come back to the ball and before the chill is off the concrete stands.

Such Thoughts, However, Have No Place Today

Such thoughts as these, however, have no place on an opening day. The tumult and the shouting, the fuss and flurry, chronic to the historic occasion will help make the P. M. merry. There will be the parade, the military evolutions, the march of the players, and the raising of the new flag.

The high and mighty from all parts of the State will be invited guests. The army and navy will be represented by the chief officers stationed here and their staffs. Governor Cox and his staff will have a special box. So will Mayor Curley and his aides in Boston government.

The Mayor and the Governor will participate in the classic crossing out of the first new ball, and having had a practice session the other day at Braves Field, should have a lot on the scare.

The game will start at 3:15, but the gates will be tossed open at 1:30, and the band will get busy then.

AMATEURS CLASH AT ELKS' SHOW

The Boston Locke of Elks will stage another high class amateur boxing tournament tonight at their headquarters, No. 10 Somerset street. Competition in the 112, 118, 125, 135 and 147 pound classes will be seen.

Secretary George Dennis reports that some of the best amateur boxers in New England will be seen in action this evening "Red" O'Grady, one of the most popular performers in New England, will attempt to win the 147 pound medal. His numerous shipmates from the U. S. S. Florida will be in attendance.

Another strong contender for the 147 pound medal is Vincent Mellow of Lowell. The Spindle City boy gave O'Grady a great battle at the last Elks show losing out by a close margin in a thrilling battle.

The boys that have entered should provide the fans with plenty of action. The Elks have been staging some successful shows this season, and the crowd should witness another good one tonight.

DORCHESTER CLUB TO STAGE BOUTS

The Dorchester Club of Dorchester will hold an amateur boxing show at its clubhouse on Talbot avenue next Monday evening in the three following classes, 112, 119, 126 (all novice). As this occasion marks the closing of the closing of the boxing season with the Dorchester Club, a large entry is expected in all the classes.

Secretary Costello of the boxing committee of the Dorchester Club has arranged a splendid vaudeville program in conjunction with the boxing bouts.

COLBY ERRORS GIVE BROWN THE VICTORY

Providence, April 28—Brown won from Colby, 5 to 2. Infield errors by the Maine players played a big part in the contest. Neubauer allowed only five hits and kept them well scattered. His wildness in the fourth, when he passed two men, paved the way for Colby's two runs.

MEXICO ORGANIZES TENNIS ASSOCIATION

A National Tennis Association has been formed in Mexico. The organization, which will be known officially as the Association Mexicana de Lawn Tennis, was created with the following officers. I Herbolls, president; Enrique Gutierrez, vice president; L. G. Padilla, Jr., secretary.

A number of the more prominent tennis clubs of the Mexico Republic have already joined and indications point to a large and representative membership within a short period.

The new Association announces that it will devote its attention to the spread of the game throughout Mexico, and the development of high class junior players.

HARVARD FRESHMEN SLAUGHTER CUSHING

Field and Slayton led the Crimson offensive with four safe crashes each. Joe McGlone, Freshman shortstop, turned in a double and a triple in addition to some pretty plays in the field.

Chaney's triple in the fourth was chiefly responsible for the four runs that the Cushing lads gathered in during the fourth inning.

NEW MARKS LOOKED FOR AT PENN CARNIVAL

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Little Pat, in all probability, will run anchor for the Maroon and Gold baton-passing quartet in the banner relay number of the approaching meet at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, in which the best in America is to be pitted against the best in Merrie England, and as the best in Merrie England has formed a habit of beating the best in America in that particular number for the past several years, a whole lot of folks will be rooting for little Pat.

The Pennay carnival, which gets going tomorrow afternoon and promises to furnish an ample portion of thrills and a new record or two, will offer several relay numbers that should be worth traveling miles to see. High school, prep school and college relays seemingly without number are listed on the two-day program, and several of the list bear an international flavor. But the one in which the bulk of the interest is centred is the two-mile international intercollegiate number.

Participating in that race will be four relay quartets representing the British universities, Oxford and Cambridge, and the American schools, Boston College, Penn State and Georgetown and as each boasts a noble outfit their meeting, even did it lack international flavor, would attract the interest of athletic fandom.

Britishers Set the Record Last Year

Last year the then Oxford-Cambridge combination set the existing world's record for the event, and while two members of that little old combination nd longer are wearing the Limie fingers, each has a successor of proved ability, capable of stepping in and stepping along to the dear old queen's taste.

American fandom needs no introduction to one of those twain for he is none other than Bill Stevenson, late of Princeton and costume possessor of the American 440 yard championship.

Bill's meetings with a now ex-B. C. man—Jake Driscoll—will be resulted by every follower of track athletics. Many a time and oft did they clash in collegiate and A. A. U. track meetings, with scarcely room for a whisker between them as they swept across the finish line. More often than not the B. C. man proved the victor, but this year, although Jake is no longer representing the Newton college, Bill believes he can send the B. C. colors trailing and, as he will run anchor for the Britishers while Pat Mahoney will assume that role for B. C., an added element of rivalry is given the big Carnival number.

Star Performers In Other Events.

However, B. C. is not certain of proving the only real rival of the Oxford-Cambridge combination. It is true that the Maroon and Gold away licked its rival American two mile quartets at the indoor collegiates, but indoor racing is one thing and outdoor racing another, and it is quite possible that either Georgetown or Penn State, who met defeat in the indoor championships, may furnish the team that will down B. C. and perhaps the British combination in the international inter collegiate two-mile relay champion ship.

But while track attention will cluster thickly in the event just touched upon, there will be no lack of it in full twenty of the one hundred events that go to make up the two-day Penn Relay Carnival program.

The intercollegiate pentathlon championship which is to be conducted tomorrow always draws a remarkably able field of all-around performers, and is of more than usual interest this year because of the close approach of the 1924 Olympic games and the desire of Americans to learn the calibre of the men who will represent us in the all-around contests at Paris. Tony Plansky, a local youth now representing George town, is one of several who are considered as possible winners of the event.

Then there are special events both in track and in field competition that bring out unusually swift or capable performers, and in several of the field numbers new world's records are not without the range of possibility. The work of Fred Tootell, captain of Bowdoin, in the hammer throw will prove of particular interest to all athletic followers, for in practice the big Bowdoin boy has tossed the weight within a very few feet of the record. Similar interest will be centred in the efforts of Ralph Hills of Princeton in the shot put, for in that test the Tiger has come within inches of Ralph Rose's world's mark.

Joe Tiplitz and Tony Julian will meet in the feature ten round bout at the Armory A. A's show at Grand Opera House next Wednesday night. Julian has been released by the Boxing Commission.

RECORD CROWD TO SEE BRAVES AND GIANTS

New York, April 28—The New York Giants, world's champions for the past two years were expected to set a few attendance records of their own today when they oppose the Boston Braves in the first pennant game of the season at the reconstructed Polo Grounds.

The partially completed extensions of the grandstand have increased the seating capacity for the opening game to 45,000, about 9,000 in excess of the previous limit. The reserved section has been sold out and indications pointed to a capacity outpouring of fans. When completed, their rebuilt stadium will house 54,500.

Elaborate opening ceremonies were planned. Notables expected to attend included Commissioner Landis, John Heydler, president of the National League; Mayor Hylan and other official dignitaries.

Lee Defeats Michaels

Worcester, April 28—Bobby Michaels of New York was defeated by George (Kid) Lee of Worcester. Lee took nearly every round, and outslugged his opponent throughout the bout.

DORCHESTER AND LATIN SCHOOL NINES CLASH

By FRED C. LANE.

Lavan "Lefty" Locke, star southpaw of Dorchester High, will be sent to the mound by Coach Bill Prendergast against Boston Latin School today. Coach Prendergast, desirous to get off to a winning start at the expense of the Purple and White team, will use his star boxman for the occasion.

The game will be played on the Walpole street grounds and marks the opening contest of the season on this famous old lot. A fast, snappy bunch of ball players wear the Dorchester uniform. All are veterans.

Latin school makes a worthy opponent, for Coach Eddie Fitzgerald also boasts of a fast team. The Purple and White color lost the opening game to St. Mark's through loose fielding by Haggerty. The star 600-yard runner had an off day.

It is more than likely that Andrews will take the slab for Latin. He hurled a fine game against the Southboro team and allowed only seven hits. Should he be as effective against the Dorchester clan a real tight game is in store for the fans who wend their way up Columbus avenue.

Dorchester is well fortified in the box and base in addition to Locke, Harold Whitmore, a corner in school circles. Whitmore broke into prominence last season against Commerce High.

Since that game he has come fast. The Dorchester infield is the fastest to represent the school in years. The Harrell brothers at second and short are a combination that is second to none.

Charlestown and East Boston play a District High League game today at Wood Island Park. The league is much faster than in other years. Coach Ford will lead the Charlestown boys, while Fred O'Brien will have charge of the East Boston squad.

Eddie Jeremiah is playing a whale of a game at shortstop for Somerville High. The hockey and football star is sure to add another letter to his credit on the diamond.

Coach Charlie Foster of the Rivers School has revised his baseball schedule. The following is the list of games to be played. April 27, Fessenden at Newton; May 1, Groton second at Groton; May 5, Thayer Academy at Braintree; May 8, Milton Academy second at Brookline; May 18, Newton High second at Brookline, May 22, pending; May 26, Middlesex second at Brookline; June 1, Dummer Academy at Byfield; June 4 Allen Chambers at Brookline.

* * *

"Bo" McMenimen, all scholastic catcher of B. C. High last season, is back at his old position for Coach Bill Dempsey's team. McMenimen is socking the ball harder than ever.

"Smokey" Kelliher's hitting has been a big factor in the fine showing made by the Cambridge Latin team. Extra base knocks are one of the features in this youngster's make-up.

LIARS' CONTEST WINNERS ON THIS PAGE DAILY

Liars' Contest

The Boston American offers two seats to "Lightnin'", the clever play at the Hollis Street Theatre, to the writer of every lie printed in this department.

Prizes are given for funny lies, the white lie that did the most good and the black lie that did the most harm.

Winners each day are requested to call at the office of the Boston American to get an order for their tickets.

LORIS DANIS, No. 44 Lamson street, Dorchester.

"A girl who lived next door to me used to keep company with a chap who loved her devotedly. Like all flappers, she thought it was good policy to keep him jealous, so she used to tell him about imaginary sweethearts she went out with when she wasn't out with him. At first he laughed at it, but as she persisted he began to believe her, and it led to a quarrel. She never forgave herself for telling those foolish lies. Today he is married—but not to her—and she is still single."

EDWIN SAUNDERS, No. 284 Brighton avenue, Allston.

"Is a lie ever excusable? I recite this case to decide that for me. During the influenza epidemic a boy I knew fell ill, and his mother took sick at the same time. After three days she died. At the time of her death the son had reached the critical stage, but had a fighting chance. He asked the doctor how his mother was and was told she had fully recovered. Later, when he had completely recovered, the truth was told to him.

"Here's a lie that unquestionably was a white lie. It saved a life. Was it excusable?"

H. F. RIDALL, No. 30 Webster street, Brooklin.

As a boy on the farm I had many pets. Among others a season a crow and a large bullhead or catfish called Shadrach. Shadrach we kept in a tub. He was very vicious and would snap out of the water for pieces of meat thrown him. One night July 4, 1876, an old white cow upset the tub and Shadrach was the next morning proclaimed permanently dead. With fitting ceremony we buried him in the garden. A terrific thunderstorm came up. It rained so hard that a flock of geese flying over folded their wings and paddled right along.

Shadrach revived and flopped around vigorously. At once we started to wash him each day we took him out for 15 minutes soon we grew to dislike water together. Shadrach from then on slept in a bucket of sand in the kitchen. On cold nights he dried up in the ashes on the hearth.

Summer came and one night we left the screen door open. Flop, flop went Shadrach out into the yard. Through a hole in the fence he tumbled and before we could rescue him the poor fish was drowned.

Contributions to this department should be mailed to the Liars' Editor, No. 60 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

HE had a big ninety acre pasture in Texas and grew these horses as fast as the railroad company could deliver the lumber.

INSTEAD of packing lassoos and guns they had to carry hammers and nails.

AFTER fifteen or twenty cowboys wearing sand paper trousers ride these horses all day you can be pretty sure that there won't be any slivers left in the saddles.

THE next thing they have to do is to ride the horses in a circle for three days to keep them from getting dizzy after they're fastened to the merry-go-round.

NO man likes to part with a horse which he has raised from a little stick of lumber

HE just hopes and prays that the man who runs the carrousel in the circus will be good to his little pet.

ONE cowboy was so lonesome for the first pony he raised that he visited every merry-go-round in the country looking for him.

HE spent ninety-seven dollars with Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey's Circus before he found him.

AND then he was broken-hearted because the horse failed to recognize the carpenter who had raised him.

THE horse had become too used to the merry-go-round to leave it, so the cowboy took out his pocket knife and cut a few shavings off the horse's back to remember him by.

SO don't laugh when you see a big husky man riding on a merry-go-round, perhaps he's only renewing friendship with one of the horses which he helped to raise.

THE TIME COMES WHEN WE SHOULD FORGET AND FORGIVE.

Difference of opinion has entranced you from a near member of your family and you regret it whether you acknowledge it or not.

But he is stubborn and you are stubborn—neither will make the first move toward reconciliation, while each wishes that the other would do so.

As the years go on you give more and more thought to the one against whom you have had ill feeling; you have much discomfiture of mind, but still you will not bring yourself to extending the hand of fellowship.

Is it not foolish to harbor such thoughts and be in a spite against one of your own flesh and blood, when you should be on good terms?

And what does it gain for you?

Can you think of one atom of good it has done for you?

You have a brother or a sister with whom you have not been on good terms for some time, but why continue the unpleasantness?

You would respect yourself more if you could go to this one, making an advance which would bridge this chasm of dislike which has separated you.

Good reason for quarreling, you, perhaps, but isn't it time to forget and to forgive?

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jeanie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents.

"You're [illegible] now!" said Jim [illegible] "I can't refuse [illegible] to make things easy for Anne, Tom, you're the owner, too."

"Thank you" said Tom with a suggestion of actual panic in his tone.

On the day after the job of furnishing our apartment passed into the hands of Tom Mason and his volunteer assistant, Daisy Condon Booth. I worked like a Trojan, refusing to worry over any problems outside of my business.

So when the telephone rang and I heard Neal speaking, it seemed as if I'd conjured his voice up by thinking so hard of his affairs.

"Babbie, will you come right up from the office and have dinner with Phoebe and me?" Neal asked.

"Of course I will. I'd [illegible] arred

But when I [illegible] to turn by way of a taxi in the dawning crush of evening traffic I learned again how fine Neal's love and chivalry are and how unfailing. Phoebe opened the door. She was sad and frightened little Phoebe who clung to me desperately and inarticularly.

"Neal's packing," she whimpered. "I don't want to be alone. I'm afraid to be alone. You won't leave me, will you, Babbie?"

I soothed her as if she were a child crying. Neal because his love had probably been terrified by Phoebe's nervous grief and fears.

"If you won't leave me I can be brave," murmured Phoebe as if it were a vow. "Now go to Neal. He is in the bedroom packing. I closed the doors between so I could speak to you first. But I'll leave them closed so he can be alone with you too."

Chilled by her tone, I opened the doors a space and pushed through. I caught a glimpse of Neal standing at the window still and silent. The creak of the doors roused him, and he flung around quickly, arresting himself and speaking in a strange, muted tone.

Father Andrew's pretty sick. I've been sent for."

In a flash I knew why Phoebe had contrived to see me first.

"You must go at once, dear," I said, holding back my emotions as the dear, brave lad had done for my sake.

"You nice boy!" I said, managing a little unsteady laugh. "Weren't you fine enough to telephone in such a way I wouldn't worry? Didn't you spare me all you could. Now I must race home and pack"—

Jim to Bring Baggage

"Phoebe phoned Jim to bring your things," explained Neal. "I wanted you to have your dinner so you wouldn't start off exhausted."

"You thought of everything." I said slowly. "You're sure Jim will bring my things?"

"Of course, Phoebe got him at the hotel. She's been such a little brick about helping me. And she's hard hit herself—poor darling. She's so sorry for me. And she's nervous now. She loves Father Andrew—everyone would, wouldn't they, Babbie? You think he'll be all right when we get there? Wonder why that long distance doesn't come. Let's go out and try to get the call through."

"I'll go, dear," I said, wanting a moment alone with Phoebe. "You finish your packing."

"All right." Neal gasped nervously. "Leave the door open. Phoebe closed it so her telephoning wouldn't drive me crazy. She had a time getting Jim. Babbe, you're sure you're willing to leave your business?"

"When Father Andrew needs me?" I reproached, dizzy with sorrow and a sense of conflicting duties.

I felt sure that the whole problem would be solved by Jim's arriving without my baggage. But as I opened the door to go in and try to get the call through Phoebe was opening the hall door and Jim stepped over the threshold.

Holding His Own

For a week Neal could report little more than that Father Andrew was holding his own. He telephoned every evening, and Phoebe seemed to live her days in a tense expectancy of his message. Nothing except Neal's voice, coming from a thousand miles away, seemed to penetrate the clouds in which she was wrapping herself.

Virginia motored into town each day and took Phoebe for walks and drives. Jim had dinner with us every night. But Phoebe's little face grew thinner and thinner, and she would not smile.

At the end of ten dragging, unhappy days there came a message that made our hearts sing. This time Neal telephoned in the morning before Phoebe was up.

"Good news!" he cried so that his voice rang out as if he were in the room. "Father Andrew slept like a baby last night. The crisis is past. The fever's broken and he's on the mend."

"Oh, Neal—how beautiful!" I cried. "How happy we can be. Plan to come home just as soon as you feel it's safe to bring Father Andrew with you. I ache to see him."

Neal agreed that would be a good plan and he'd carry it out in a few days. We laughed and choked for a minute in our happiness and relief. Then I went in to take the message to Phoebe.

"How splendid!" she cried. "Oh, Anne—I want to look rosy and sweet when my boy comes back—not all drawn and haggard. What can I do to get over being so frightened?"

"Poor kiddie," I said, sitting down on the edge of her bed and taking her in my arms. "You were terrified. But everything's all right now."

"I'll telephone Jeanie not to bother coming in today," said Phoebe with a little sigh of relief. "We've been seeing too much of each other. Jeanie's a dear, but her spine's so straight she bends backward. It makes me nervous. I keep feeling I have to kind of lean over, too."

"Jeanie her gently," I admonished, laughing at Phoebe's vignette of her sister. "And how would you like to shop for the new apartment this afternoon?"

Phoebe clapped her hands and announced that nothing would take her mind off herself so perfectly as helping pick out things for my home. So when Tom dropped in at my office toward one o'clock and told me he had some charming old colonial things for the dining room he'd like me to see before I decided on the William and Mary suite we'd been considering, I felt that Phoebe was looking for a real diversion.

She arrived just as we were discussing a meeting place, and then Tom—in huge delight at this encounter with the youngest of the Harrisons—suddenly began insisting that we must have a lunch party. It amused me because he hadn't mentioned lunch till Phoebe arrived. Idly I explained this as a new conservation not at all unbecoming to Tom.

A Remembered Number

"Do you mind if I use your telephone before we start?" asked Tom, adding as he glanced nervously about my office, "You have a booth? It's some business detail——"

"Take my desk phone," I replied. "No one will—disturb you. Phoebe must snatch a few minutes with Betty and Miss May, who'll just about be returning from lunch. We'll wait for you in the outer office."

Tom smiled acquiescence. But when we got to the outer office my partners hadn't returned. Phoebe and I were chatting when the telephone rang. I picked it up and before I had time to realize that the call wasn't for me I heard central say, "3069 doesn't answer."

Realizing this was for Tom, I put back the receiver hurriedly. But though I hadn't heard the name of the exchange, the digits "3-0-6-9" rang through my mind with the familiarity of a half-remembered strain.

Tom came back and urged us to come, explaining that Daisy would be there, too. "It's all right girls, isn't it?" he asked.

When we arrived at the restaurant to which Tom was taking us for lunch, Phoebe and I went in at once, while Tom stayed outside waiting for the taxi-driver to make change. As we sauntered down the main corridor, Daisy Booth rushed out of a little waiting room and with only a most casual nod for us, darted toward the door

The Hour

DRAWN BY POPINI

THE sun swings high in the heavens and casts upon the dial the shadow of the hour—the clock in the steeple chimes its reverberating record of the time—and, after one glance at her wristwatch, to make sure that she cannot be mistaken, she turns to leave the place where he was to have met her long ere this.

Unseeing even Cupid, who stands so near, gazing at the sands of time slipping through his hour-glass, she walks away——

Up from the shore where the tide, so he has learned already, has not waited for him, the man who is late dashes to greet her. Late for his appointment—late for his love tryst—will she, as he perhaps deserves, coldly tell him "Time, tide and maid wait for no man"?

Boston Brown Bread

One and one-half cups granulated cornmeal, 1½ cups bread flour, 1 cup molasses, 1 level teaspoonful soda, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 pint boiling water. Sift dry ingredients together, mix with molasses, and add last the boiling water. This will make a thin batter, but do not thicken it any more. Pour in greased can, cover tightly and steam for 5 hours or as much more as desired. When ready to serve do not cut with knife, but with a hemp cord. Begin at top of loaf, wind cord about it at the distance down to make a good slice and cross the two ends with a quick jerk, which will make the slice.)

Sure Way to Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. Then you destroy it entirely.

To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need.

It was during a hand in which he took no part, but which resulted disastrously for a young cavalry officer at the table, that Royce caught Bertram Waite employing one of old Phil's pet bits of knavery.

His heart sank within him at the realization of the man's dishonorable tactics and he glanced at Lily to see if, by any chance, she had been aware of them. Apparently she had not. She was chatting gayly with the man beside her and when the hands came around again she picked up her cards and played them with the same smiling indifference which was customary with her whenever gambling became the order of the evening.

Royce went home sick at heart, but by the time he sat into another game at Waite's he had made up his mind what to do. The young cavalry officer was back again and once more Royce saw him hooked in the same barefaced manner. When the game broke up and the others were on the veranda with Lily, saying good-night, he lingered behind with the host. As the latter gathered up the chips from the table Royce picked up a deck of cards.

"Have you ever seen this trick, Mr. Waite?" he inquired blandly. "It's one I learned from an ex-convict."

With a deft flourish he extended the sleight which had proved so costly to the young cavalry officer earlier in the evening. Then he tossed the cards back on the table and looked straight into the eyes of his host.

. . . An evil scowl spread over Waite's features. "Well?" he said, coolly.

"I think you understand," said Royce.

"And if I do? What then?" It was plain that his guest's disclosure had not shaken Waite in the slightest.

"You will return young Macey his money?"

"And if I choose to do nothing of the sort?"

"Then I shall tell Lily what kind of a man she has for a father."

Royce thought he had never heard a more pleasant laugh than the one Waite now gave vent to. "That's good—that's very good," he said. "Why, my ingenious friend, do you suppose for one instant that Lily is not aware of my methods?"

A Despicable Threat

"It's gospel, none the less. Why else do you suppose she encourages brainless cubs like Macey to come around here? For the pleasure of their company? Hardly."

Royce felt a burning flush of anger creeping over him at this unveiling of Waite's inward feelings. "I suppose I fall within the same category?" he queried.

"On the contrary, Royce, you're rather clever. Too damn clever, as I have just found out. But you'll keep your mouth shut."

"Will I? Not if I know it! Unless you return Macey's money to him by tomorrow night I shall denounce this place as a deadfall, and both you and your daughter as cheats! You can have your choice."

Waite stepped quickly around the table and glared into Royce's face with an expression so malignant that for a moment he seemed not quite sane.

"And the moment you do that," he threatened, "I shall publicly accuse you of betraying my daughter here in my own house!"

Royce stepped backward, unable to believe his ears. Could this man mean what he was saying? Could any one stoop so low as that? "But—but—Lily—" he stammered. "If I would most certainly deny any such charge."

"I have no doubt she would," agreed her father. "But could you force her to do so—publicly?

Old Cronin Who Told Kenneth How Opium Was Smuggled.

Would you even let me make such a charge as that in the first place? You know you wouldn't, for your own sake, if not for hers. And yet as sure as you're standing there, young fellow me lad, I'll make the charge if you so much as open your mouth about what you saw here tonight. Now, you can get out of here and think it over."

The cold effrentery of the elder man triumphed over his accuser's youthful indignation. Royce was stupefied by the corruption he had uncovered. It was quite without his range of experience and he knew not how to meet it. He turned to go. Lily glanced into the room on her way back from bidding her guests good-night, but seeing the expressions on the faces of the two men she instantly sensed trouble. With a playful attempt to make her "Good night, Ken," sound natural and cheery, she passed quickly out of sight.

Curse of Morphine

Royce walked home, his mind a chaos of conflicting emotions. Suddenly through the tempest of his thoughts there shot a beacon of light. Col. Meshane! The old army doctor knew something that might clear up this matter. He would go to him the next day and ask him, straight out, "What kind of a man is this father of Lily Waite's?"

"Ahn! So you're come upon it at last, have you?" said McShane when the question was put to him. "Well, then, my boy, perhaps I can speak more freely, but tell me, first, what opened your eyes?"

Royce told him, and concluded the account by asking, "What can make any man such a frightful rotter as all that?"

"The same thing that has done it to Waite—morphine," replied the doctor. "I happen to know that he has been eating about three grains of the stuff a day for the past year and a half or more. Result—complete moral disintegration. He may be taking more now; probably is, if he has taken to crooked card playing in order to keep himself in funds."

A Pitiful Tragedy

So that was it. Royce gazed abstractedly at the floor as the fact came home to him. Once again the shadow of the poppy had fallen across his path. "But Lily," he said, "do you suppose she really knows? The man has the nerve of the devil. He may have faced me down with a lie. I can hardly force myself to believe that she knows he's a sharper and connives with him in fleecing his victims."

"Poor Lily has little choice in the matter, I fear. Her mother's people are all in England and are as poor as poverty itself. The child can only cling to her father for the time being, in the hope that she will make a match with some decent fellow and get away before the inevitable crash comes."

"What a pitiful tragedy," said Royce. "No wonder she looks wistful. Well, I'll keep my mouth shut, of course—just as he said I would, the blackguard—but their house has seen the last of me, you can lay your last ha'penny on that."

Next to the letter from Dublin Royce found in his room after deciding to avoid the Waite home was one from his father. He opened the latter first.

"By this post or the next," wrote Gavin Royce, "you will hear from your Aunt Anastasia's solicitors that she has died and left you a matter of several hundred pounds, almost a fortune by any means but far more than you deserve. The old lady became forgetful toward the end, or I'm sure she would have sympathized with my indignation at your heartless desertion of the old place and would have given her money elsewhere. Now that you are to get it, however, I presume you will go traveling to your heart's content. In that connection I have only this to say: If your rovings ever bring you anywhere near to Ballymacooly, you might stop off a moment and pass the time of day with the old man you once were proud to own as your father."

Royce swallowed hard as he took in the spirit of pride and loneliness with which the concluding sentence of the letter was suffused. "Good old governor," he murmured. "I'll do more than much at least." He turned to the other communication and found that it confirmed his father's account of the legacy. The money was at his disposal the moment he chose to cable for it.

Behind the Counter.

The next day he had a conference with Sir Charles, at the conclusion of which he said, "So that's how it stands, sir. I'll stay on until you can get some one to replace me, but as soon as I've shown him the ropes I'll be off to try my luck in another part of the world."

The particular spot in the particular part of the world he had in mind was the Far East Shore. Fifth avenue, near Thirtieth street, New York city, and when he turned up there some three months later Wadleigh Baron met him, quite literally, with open arms.

Bubbling with geniality, Baron took his new protege about the store, showing him the stock, discussing contemplated improvements, and introducing him to everybody from the head salesman down to the old woman whose sole task was to keep things free from dust.

From the outset Royce made it his business to familiarize himself with every article in the entire stock, a process which it took many many months to carry out, but which resulted in a store of information quite invaluable to him, as well as to his employer. This, added to his special knowledge of the Orient, gave him an advantage over the other salesmen and by the end of his first year and a half with Baron he was outselling them two to one.

From Clerk to Boss

Baron's prediction that he would prove an asset to the business was more than fulfilled. Incidentally Royce was rapidly building up a personal clientele whose insistence upon being served by him and him only was swelling his commissions in a way that made his fellow-workers writhe with envy.

"More intuition on my part," remarked Baron on the evening when Royce turned in a record for the biggest individual day's sales the books had ever recorded. "I know the personality needed for this game, and I knew you had it the minute I laid eyes on you. Beginning the first of the month you will assume the duties of head salesman and if you retain your good looks and your energy and your persuasiveness for another two years I shall have to take you into partnership in self-defence."

Though spoken partly in jest, Baron's words proved prophetic, for matters progressed so satisfactorily that in the fifth year of Royce's service the partnership became an actuality.

During the period of his apprenticeship Royce had lived modestly but well and, so far as his means permitted, had overlooked none of the wonderful diversions which New York has to offer. The theatres, the art exhibits, the concerts and the opera had found in him a steady patron and he had acquired a circle of friends and acquaintances wide enough to make his leisure hours exceedingly pleasant.

Besides introducing him as a member of his club in the city, Baron secured memberships for him in the Rockdale Golf Club and in the yacht club at Birchmont. His patron already having a host of friends in all three organizations, Royce soon found himself the recipient of more invitations for affairs of all sorts than any one man possibly could accept. In order to keep things even by entertaining others in return, he moved into an apartment on Central Park South, decorated it in a fashion that no one in another line of business could have approached for the same outlay, and installed a highly efficient Japanese man servant to see that the machinery of hospitality was kept in smooth running order.

Fortune, for Kenneth Royce of Ballymacooly, seemed to be at the flood, and as he gayly rode the crest of the wave who should come sailing along but Carra Leyton, flushed by three consecutive seasons of social conquests, red on mischief and mischief on her mind.

Carra of the chestnut hair, Carra the imperious, Carra the impulsive, Carra the only daughter of Haskell Leyton, the promoter, who had put over half a dozen paying enterprises in as many years and who was also riding the tide of good fortune.

Progressive Friendship

The first time Carra and Kenneth met, which was at a yacht club dance, they acknowledged the introduction casually, took a few turns around the floor and spent the rest of the evening observing each other from a distance.

The second time they met, which was at the golf club, they were on opposing sides in a mixed foursome, and their conversation was limited to such commonplaces as might be exchanged during the brief intervals when they foregathered on the successive greens or stood about in tees awaiting their turn to drive off.

His patron already having a host of friends in all three organizations, Royce soon found himself the recipient of more invitations for affairs of all sorts than any one man possibly could accept. In order to keep things even by entertaining others in return, he moved into an apartment on Central Park South, decorated it in a fashion that no one in another line of business could have approached for the same outlay, and installed a highly efficient Japanese man servant to see that the machinery of hospitality was kept in smooth running order.

Fortune, for Kenneth Royce of Ballymacooly, seemed to be at the flood, and as he gayly rode the crest of the wave who should come sailing along but Carra Leyton, flushed by three consecutive seasons of social conquests, red on mischief and mischief on her mind and mischief of her own heart. Carra of the chestnut hair, Carra the imperious, Carra the impulsive, Carra the only daughter of Haskell Leyton, the promoter, who had put over half a dozen paying enterprises in as many years and who was also riding the tide of good fortune.

Progressive Friendship

The first time Carra and Kenneth met, which was at a yacht club dance, they acknowledged the introduction casually, took a few turns around the floor and spent the rest of the evening observing each other from a distance.

The second time they met, which was at the golf club, they were on opposing sides in a mixed foursome, and their conversation was limited to such commonplaces as might be exchanged during the brief intervals when they foregathered on the successive greens or stood about in tees awaiting their turn to drive off.

THERE was a knock at the door—Cappy put his fingers to his lips: "It's Cohen." He opened the door and admitted a suave little man who carried his hat in one hand and in the other a blue vase.

"I am here on the dot," Mr. Rieke remarked.

"Right you are, Cohen, and you've got the treasure with you, let me see it," and he carefully took the vase and held it to the light.

"Look at that, Skinner—isn't the color beautiful, and the shape classic, wonderful, the soul of form; if Keats had ever seen this; however, here it is. Mr. Cohen, handle carefully and place it in the window of your shop in plain sight."

The vase was returned to its owner, who received it gingerly. "And how about my shop window?" he asked, "that was smashed the last time?"

"That's all attended to," Cappy assured him: I've arranged with a policeman to stand guard, so that won't happen again."

Cohen nodded. "I'll trust I go."

"Run along," said Cappy. "See you later."

The antique dealer departed with the blue vase, while Cappy rubbed his hands and Skinner scowled. His further remarks on the folly of the test were prevented by the entrance of Mary, accompanied by her friend Mr. Peck. They both were smiling; they both were happy. Mary did not wear the engagement ring Mr. Peck had slipped on her finger at the Poulet d'or, but to Cappy's shrewd eyes she did not need to.

Mr. Peck was dressed much like Mary's fashionable friends; he wore a top hat and a cutaway coat and presented an appearance of which any girl might be proud.

And as for Mary—Skinner's glance softened as he saw her; she was a prize he was going to hold to; he prayed from the bottom of his heart that Bill Peck would be successful in the test he was to be asked to make, and he even pictured him sailing to China and himself waving a fond farewell to him.

Cappy Ricks looked like a wise old owl. He had gauged the situation correctly; he saw that these two were engaged and he saw that Skinner was anxious to get Bill out of the country.

Mary came up to him and pulled him by the arm: "Come into the other room, Cappy. I want to ask you about the new golf course."

Skinner was not interested. It had always been a mystery to him how an able-bodied man could play at golf. He would have called it a fool's game if so many men he knew with brains had not sworn by it.

Cappy led Mary to the far corner of the next room, and she took both his hands and stood looking at him.

"Guess," said she.

Cappy leaned forward and kissed her. "Fine," my dear; couldn't ask anything better. And I've got something to tell you: I think Bill's going to have the China post."

"You think," said Mary; "don't you know?"

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Is Grandmother's Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

TELL IT AT DINNER

"You're looking tired, old chap."

"Yes," said Jones wearily. "I'm afreid I'm getting past work now."

"Never, never!" exclaimed Smith cheerfully, smacking the other on the back. "I thought that about myself once, but I've cured all that now."

"How do you do that?" asked Jones.

"Why," said Smith, "I took a memory course. Now I've got good and clear a brain as ever, in fact, I never forget anything."

"That's fine! What's the name of the course?"

ROYAL ROMANCES

By Jessie Lee Weeks

QUEEN Sat-Kames was the bird of Paradise of old Egypt, the most exquisite and luxurious of the beauties who passed on secrets of make-up to the alluring Cleopatra. Her devotion to the cosmetic box and the hairdresser was her undoing. Hers was the tragedy of a beautiful woman who relies entirely on her physical charms to hold the affection of her husband.

Sat-Kames was one of the Queens of Amen-Hete I., but she didn't long remain his favorite. Instead of studying the things that were dear to him and concentrating herself in his mind with those things which were necessarily for him to retain his throne, all her time was taken up with personal adornment.

A granddaughter of old Queen Aah-hetep I. it was perhaps from her lighter, brighter side that Sat-Kames inherited her own fatal vanity and love of dress. She had a good figure, well developed; straight fine features, white skin, dark chestnut hair, fine and wavy; small hands and tapering fingers with rosy tinted nails.

Sat-Kames used a great many kinds of perfume, her favorite consisting of myrrh, broom, frankincense, buckthorn and several other ingredients, some of which were obtained from foreign plants. These substances were pounded, mixed together and a certain quantity was put in the fire. Then the smell in the house and of the clothes was pleasant.

But with all the ingenuity that Sat-Kames exercised in enchancing her physical charms, her husband turned from her and made another his "chief wife," whose progeny inherited the kingdom. At the age of thirty she died and was buried with all the exquisite splendor in which she had lived.

ETIQUETTE POINTERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it proper to have a gift of silver engraved with the initial of the bride or of the groom? "A." is the bride's initial and "R" is the groom's.

KAY.

THE piece of silver should be marked with the present initials of the bride-to-be. Have it marked either "A" or with the initial of the first name also. That is, supposing her name is Mary Anderson, have the silver marked "M. A."

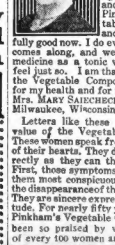
WOMAN'S HEALTH RESTORED

She Claims Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did It After Everything Else Failed

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I feel that I ought to let you know about my case.



I was ailing and couldn't do my housework and washing I was so run-down, just from having one child. I took a lot of medicines and had doctors. Then I gave them all up and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me wonderfully good now. I do every thing that comes along, and we all take your medicine and think when we don't feel just so. I am thankful for what the Vegetable Compound has done for my health and for my family."—Mrs. MARY SAIECHECK, 944 28th St., Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Letters like these testify to the worth of the Vegetable Compound. These women speak from the fullness of their hearts. They describe as correctly as they can their conditions: First, those symptoms that affected them most conspicuously; and later the disappearance of those symptoms. They are sincere expressions of gratitude. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been so praised by women. 98 out of every 100 women are benefited by

Try this easy way to heal your skin with Resinol

If you are suffering from eczema, ringworm or similar itching, red, unsightly skin affection, bathe the sore places with Resinol Soap and hot water, then gently apply a little Resinol Ointment. You will be astonished how instantly the itching stops and healing begins. In most cases the sick skin quickly becomes clear and healthy again, at very little cost.

Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap are sold by all dealers in drugs and toilet goods.

Don't make coffee with cold water and bring slowly to the boil, or it will have a "dead" taste. Make it with boiling water, and allow it to simmer sufficiently, or its flavor will be too harsh. It should boil slowly for at least fifteen minutes over a low flame.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

There are two kinds of success: First—Success as a money-maker and as a doer.

Second—Success as a human being.

There are many in the one class and many in the other class. But not so very many attain both kinds of success.

• • •

A very fat purse and very great popularity, indeed, rarely go hand in hand. J. D. Rockefeller once remarked to me, while speaking of the public's attitude towards him, "It's perfectly natural that many of those who have not acquired much of this world's goods should not feel altogether friendly towards anyone who has acquired a very large share. You must not condemn people for feeling that way. It is natural."

• • •

Scattered over the country, however, you do meet an occasional wealthy man whose popularity matches his purse. Many rich men are so disliked by their fellow-mortals that, instead of being a genuine national asset, they are a national detriment, a national liability. The man who combines notable achievement with notable popularity is, on the other hand, an invaluable national asset.

How is such a double-barrelled success attained? In the East, Charles M. Schwab—himself a conspicuous exemplar—has much interestingly on this subject. In the West, Herbert Fleishhacker is perhaps the most conspicuous example of the same type. I have been writing a character-study of this man who, starting with nothing, has become one of foremost bankers and upbuilder of business enterprises in the Far West, and, in doing it, has earned the good will of the people in extraordinary measure.

Some of the sayings I wormed out of Mr. Fleishhackers may contain suggestions for those of you who would like to become both successful and well-liked.

When I asked him how he had been able to reach this present place in the world of affairs, he replied:

"I gained my most valuable experience as a drummer on the road for seven years, from the time I was seventeen until I reached twenty-four. The biggest thing I then learned was the necessity for strict-honesty and upbuilding it, always, with courtesy and cheerfulness. They simply couldn't discourage me. They kicked me out at the front door, I returned, smiling, at the back door. I called on some prospects regularly for three or four years before I finally landed them.

• • •

"I believed in my line, my goods; and I believed in myself. I simply wouldn't take rebuffs. When I knew that I could supply a man with goods he needed, and supply him at the right price, I felt that it was just as much in his interest to see me as it was in my interest to see him. So, if he couldn't realize the right away, why should I give up?"

Then he added, "I don't believe in giving up easily.

"Courtesy is not only one of the most beautiful graces of life, but it is highly essential in making a real success of one's life.

"I often said to myself that if I ever attained any position of importance I would be absolutely a crank on the subject of being kind and considerate towards others, especially towards young men trying to make headway in the world. In fact, I am more punctilious to show every courtesy to poor people than to the rich. I never allowed myself to forget that a kind word from a man above you makes a pleasing impression and tends to make the hurdling of stiles a little easier.

"In order to take hold of big projects and carry them through to success, a man must be of an optimistic cast of mind. I don't mean that he should be in the primer class, taking everything for granted and looking only on the sunny side of things. He must dig down into the stern facts of every proposition and not shut his eyes to difficulties or possible snags. But his whole outlook upon life must be optimistic, cheerful; he must think well of mankind as a whole and have a deep-rooted faith that, as the poet said, 'the very stars in their course' are on the side of those who are trying to accomplish worthwhile purposes of life.

"Sound judgment? Why, yes, it all pretty much gets down to a question of sound judgment, and sound judgment is merely another name for common sense. While judgment can in a sense be cultivated by thorough study and mature experience, still I rather believe it is largely intuitive, that some men are born with a larger measure of it than other men."

• • •

Steels Are Leaders in Strong Market With Sugar Group Also in Demand

CUYAMEL FRUIT AT ITS HIGH FOR YEAR

Steels were leaders in a strong New York market today with the sugar group also in special demand. Cuyamel Fruit made its bow on the big board, selling at its previous record high, 64¾, contrasting with a 1923 low on the Curb of 55¾.

Sloss-Sheffield sold up better than a point to a new 1923 high. Three point net gains for Colorado Fuel, Union Pacific, Consolidated Gas, DuPont, Crucible, American Water Works, Corn Products, General Electric, Lima Locomotive, Bethlehem Steel, Pittsburgh & West Virginia at its previous high. Tobacco Products, Willys-Overland pfd. and Woolworth.

American Beet Sugar was up 2¾ to 46¾. Money renewed at 4½.

Initial prices were mixed at the opening but there was a preponderance of slight gains, especially in the steel and food issues. Oils were variable but mostly lower. Little interest was displayed in the equipments and motors, while coppers were a trifle better.

Active bidding for public utility shares characterized early operations. Advances were also registered by a wide assortment of industrials and specialties, with Postum Cereal jumping 4 points.

Foreign exchanges opened lower. Demand sterling was quoted at $4.61¾, off ⅝, and French francs at 6.73¼ cents, off 4 points.

STOREY WARNS OF BUSINESS CHECK

President V. T. Storey of Atchison, in Topeka to attend the annual meeting, said: "There is a wave of prosperity, not abating, but already in full tide, in the United States from coast to coast. It is reflected in enlargement of freight over railroads, in the building and in the development of entire country. It is fundamentally sound and based on factors which justify it, but there is chance it will be overdone and a check suffered comparable to the check business suffered in 1921."

SUMMER SHOW AT WALDRON'S ON MONDAY

The season for Summer shows is just around the corner and, according to an announcement made by Charles H. Waldron, the Casino will enter the list with a double entertainment — the combination of two burlesque attractions rolled into one big revue.

Jimmie Cooper.

The opening date is set for next Monday, when Jimmie Cooper and his "Beauty Revue" and a colored revue called "Runnin' Wild" will begin an indefinite engagement. There are really two shows in this combination—one white and the other black—and the strength of the company will total seventy people.

Between the two shows there will be more jazz, more comedy, more dancing and more fun jammed into one burlesque entertainment than Boston has ever seen.

In the first part of the production Jimmie Cooper, will be assisted in the fun-drive by Eddie Fox and Freddie Harper, tramp comedians. Cooper's wrestling models will prove that girls, too, can wrestle. In addition there will be the Cooper chorus of eighteen pretty maids.

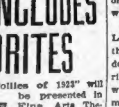
"Runnin' Wild," the colored revue, will provide an additional show. "The Tiger Band of ten jazzy-jazz musicians and a chorus of eighteen "High Brown Steppers" will play, sing and dance as only colored artists can.

'BABY FOLLIES' CAST INCLUDES FAVORITES

"The Baby Follies of 1923" will be presented in Fine Arts Theatre tomorrow and Saturday evening by the many talented children who comprise the Madame Lyman School for Stage Children.

Eleanor Lee

Among the children who will have feature roles are "Baby" Josephine Leonard of South Boston, and "Baby" Eleanor Lee of Medford, two of the cleverest amateur entertainers in New England, whose miniature interpretation of "Gallagher and Shean" has been applauded by thousands; Ethel Bon, classic dancer; Lawrence Lester and Jane Loots.

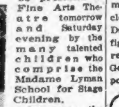


Josephine Leonard

Others who will be featured include Carroll Montague, Ethel Birnbaum, Muriel Woodward, Ruth Bennett, Edna Carter, James and Hazel Murray, Irma Montague, Frances Woodward, Olive Lester, Ruth and Helen Dennehy and Verna Smith.

Muriel Woodward

The feature number of Friday evening's performance will be a Spanish cabaret, and an Egyptian ballet will be Saturday evening's offering.

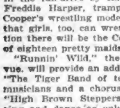


Ethel Birnbaum

All these children have added many worthy charities in aiding the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund. Their big entertainment and charity ball in Copley Plaza Hotel last Winter, in aid of the American Basket Fund was one of the most artistic successes ever conducted there.

Bright Spots in Shadowland

MAURICE TOURNEUR has gone and done it. For several years the noted French director has had a hankering to put on the makeup and once again appear before the clicking camera. During the course of the Metro picture "Brass Bottle" Tourneur just couldn't resist.



Maurice Tourneur.

Thus when this production is released by First National, the distinguished director will be seen for the first time in this country in the characterization of a part on the screen. Not since some ten years ago, when Tourneur enjoyed wide popularity abroad as a screen actor, has he appeared before the camera.

DIDN'T GROW MUCH.

CAN you imagine being named after a famous star—a statuesque beauty—Madame Elliot to be exact—and then growing up to be less than five feet tall. Also can you picture the shock to the loving mother who so carefully selected your name. This is the fate of pretty little Marion Elliott Hicks, who is playing the part of Mabel in the Cosmopolitan Production, "The Daughter of Mother McGinn," with Forrest Stanley and Colleen Moore. George William Hill is directing this Jack Boyle "Boston Blackie" story under the supervision of Frances Marion, who made the screen adaptation.

MILES OF FILM.

"FOOTAGE" is a term applied to the length of pictures. "Mileage" probably would be more accurate. For instance, in the photographing of "Ben Hur" more than sixteen miles of film ran through the cameras. In its finished cutting the feature is only a little more than a mile long. To have exposed the original length of the film it would have required nine and one-half days of continuous shooting, at the rate of one foot per second. But pictures are not made that way. It required nearly three months to make this Metro production, practically all of this time was spent in Natchez, Miss.

MARY PICKFORD GOT $10,000 EACH WEEK

New York, April 21.—Mary Pickford was paid the trifling salary of $10,000 a week way back in 1917, according to the testimony of Alexander Lightman before the Federal Trade Commission, which is now holding hearings to determine whether the Famous Players Lasky Corporation, six affiliated companies and six individuals constitute a motion picture trust. The witness said that at the time the merger was completed between the Famous Players Lasky Corporation and Bosworth, Inc., that Adolph Zukor was paying Mary $10,000 a week.

REUNION SATURDAY OF 104TH INFANTRY

Veterans of the 104th Infantry, the first American unit to be decorated by the French government, will hold their fifth annual reunion Saturday morning, in American Legion Hall, Cambridge. At 12:30 the colors of the regiment will be decorated with additional battle ribbons at State House. A parade will feature the afternoon and a military ball in the evening will close the festivities of "Aprement Day." The 104th, in three days fighting at Aprement in April, 1918, repulsed a far superior force of Germans and saved a strategic point for the Allies.

Forty-Eight Hour Bill Is Killed in Rhode Island

By a strict party vote Rhode Island has killed the forty-eight-hour bill which the real people of Massachusetts have enjoyed for a number of years.

To the honor of the Democratic Senators be it said that every one of them voted in favor of the forty-eight-hour law.

It is the same type of a Republican Senate, representing "rotten boroughs," which killed the same law several weeks ago in New Hampshire. In Rhode Island as well as in New Hampshire the mandate of the people was overwhelming for a forty-eight-hour law, but in Rhode Island as well as in New Hampshire the Senate is not controlled by a majority of the people of the State. Indeed, the rotten borough system of Rhode Island makes that government really unconstitutional in the true sense of our National Constitution, which guarantees to each State a republican form of government. The city of Providence, which comprises more than half the population of the State and more than half its wealth, is given only the same representation in the Senate as the smallest town whose voters could all be put in one kitchen is given in the same body and the Senate has all the powers of the government. The Senate enjoys both legislative, executive and judicial functions. The judges of Rhode Island hold their offices at the pleasure of the Legislature, of which the Senate is the controlling body, and not during good behavior. The government has practically no executive powers that are not subject to the control of the Senate. The Senate is the whole government of Rhode Island, and in the Senate the tiniest little back water town has as much power as the great city of Providence. Such a thing is unbelievable in an American State.

Let the Democrats, under the able leadership of their Lieutenant-Governor, who is presiding over the Senate, continue the struggle for a Constitutional Convention. There is nothing in the decision of the Supreme Court of Rhode Island in the Dorr case which need deter them from getting a Constitutional Convention and from amending the Constitution, if a majority of the people of Rhode Island want it amended and modernized and put under the control of the people.

Slow Recognition

More Delay for Russia Probably

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Universal Service announced that this government was about to recognize the Russian and Mexican governments. The idea in recognizing Russia at last was said to be based on a desire to get ahead of Japan. The recent religious execution may delay Russian recognition.

The Russian government, whatever we may think of it, rules in Russia, and has ruled longer than the government of France or England, both of which have changed heads while Lenin and Trotzky have ruled in Russia.

Obregon gives Mexico stable government. And in spite of the fact that American oil exploiters think they should govern in Mexico, this country ought to recognize the Mexican government as ruling Mexico, not the oil interests of the United States.

Going a Long Way Back—

For Soup, or for History

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Poincare says he is going to keep the Ruhr, hanging on to protect France, and as an argument he reminds you of Dunkirk and how England hung onto that French port to protect herself against France.

When they asked the cowboy to have some oxtail soup, he said: "Oxtail, that's going a long way back for soup."

Dunkirk is going a long way back for a Ruhr argument. Poincare says France must protect herself. France SHOULD protect herself. Her civilization is important to the world. But with the millions of Russia and Germany so close, and the cheap price of dynamite-carrying flying machines, the only protection worth while is JUSTICE, and even that is rather shaky protection in these "scrap of paper" days.

Coakley Decision Wise

The Boston American is greatly pleased at the decision of Judge Carroll and his associates on the Supreme Bench not to try the Berman case against Coakley. It was a wise decision.

That its justice is obvious does not detract from the sense of satisfaction which all good citizens will feel that the court has decided in favor even of obvious justice. The courts being composed of human beings, just as liable to err as any of us and just as subject to waves of temperament and prejudice as any of us, do not always do the obviously just thing when they are subjected to unusual circumstances. Under certain circumstances the "judicial poise" is an ideal concept rather than an actuality.

Now we hope that the Superior Court will give Coakley his trial by jury. The judge of the Superior Court who undertakes to decide the facts will find himself in almost as much embarrassment as the Supreme Court itself and might possibly find itself obliged to decide the facts quite differently from what the Supreme Court appeared to decide them. It is neither fair to the judge himself nor to the parties to subject the court to this embarrassment.

The law the Supreme Court will have to determine no matter how embarrassing it may be, but the facts the jury ought in all cases to determine where it is possible, and particularly in this case.

Butler as Chairman

The report that the Hon. William M. Butler is to succeed Secretary of War Weeks, who has resigned from the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee, will be welcome news to all who know Mr. Butler's character.

We disagree with him in almost all political views. Even as a Republican, he is a bit conservative. But he is a square man, and an able man. Sometimes those qualities are as important to the public interests as the mere profession of policies.

AMERICA WILL NOT JOIN THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

By Herbert Kaufman

LOTS of good news. The President, in a straight-from-the-shoulder speech to national editors, unequivocally repledges opposition to any form of participation in the League of Nations.

"The wars and hates of foreign States are not for us to share." Lord Robert did not take a scalp at the White House.

Mr. Harding would have us join the World Court, of which he is still a fervent advocate, and assures the country that The Hague tribunal is neither an offspring nor dependent of the league. But he does not esteem membership in that body as a comparable issue to many domestic problems. There are more situations to concern us within these United States than abroad.

He pleads for support of a merchant marine, deplores the weakening of party spirit and corresponding growth of bloc power, warns against the errant trends of "pure democracy" and asserts that no government has ever successfully endured under its influence.

The President requires no opinion nurse. Gentlemen who suggest that the executive needs a press agent are advised that Mr. Harding can talk for himself. When people decide upon a leader they hardly expect him to pick a mouthpiece.

Hands Across the Rio Grande

The President predicts re-establishment of friendly relations. The fence along the Rio Grande comes down and one more prodigal returns to the family of nations.

The western world, at least, sealed in peace and understanding. Europe and Asia aren't such good managers, as witness China, Russia, Germany and the Balkans.

Even the Netherlands, long lightest taxed piece of Europe, with even free cigars and wines, now staggers under the white man's common burden of budgets.

Living costs, hitherto lowest on the continent, have so advanced that farmers and dairymen begin to sell their holdings and emigrate to lands of greater opportunity.

Denmark is establishing colonies in Madagascar. Hardships and hope are preferable to half-loaves and patches.

Locked in the North's Refrigerator

Nature has kept a few things on the ice and under it. The Arctic isn't one of her bungles. Beneath those vast glacial fields are inestimable mineral deposits, endless coal beds and time alone knows what else.

Untold billions of resources are locked in the North's refrigerator.

Christian Leden, a Norwegian explorer, brings word of oil wells near the Pole. Eskimos shun the region. They detest the smell. Anything's useless to folk without imagination. Kimberley was wasted on the Boers.

California diggings chuckled at the poverty of squatters scraping bacon rinds while abandoned mines hoarded secret troves of diamonds. Five hundred stones have been found at Cherokee. Yesterday was a squinty searcher. Grandfather knew the least of anything. He even ate sweetbreads and let diabetes eat him. Adam might have had insulin if he had used his wits.

The Ogre in the Oysterbeds

Oysters will soon be as scarce as buffalos. Dr. Nelson of the Shell Fisheries and State Experimental Station in New Jersey beholds the destruction of all Atlantic beds unless regardless industries cease to pollute our waters with their wastes.

Bivalves must breed in clean grounds; oil scum, metal fillings, pulp and acids are ending a great food supply.

Rhode Island's rentals from oyster acreage have dropped from $166,000 to $22,000 in ten years. Lobsters and shellfish of all sorts are on their way to extinction. Shad shoals no longer crowd the Hudson and Delaware.

Recklessness is an ogre of insatiate appetite. Laboratory larders, prophesied by Steinmetz, won't be a matter of choice if conservation continues to urge its case in vain.

Park Benches and Crimson Carpets

London prepares for another State wedding. The Prince of Wales, their majesties and loyal subjects vie with each other in gifts to the Duke of York's bride. Coronets without count, gold plate, motor cars and a castle pour into the lap of a commoner's daughter.

Read all about it. Tomorrow shan't witness any similar ceremonies and pageants.

British labor feels its parliamentary chews and confidently awaits an hour when national purses won't be drained for powerless puppets and their theatricalities.

Thoughtful citizens watch one of the last unrollings of Westminster's crimson carpet and estimate how much the empire's staggering debts can be cut by democracy's stern shears.

Time Does Not Misjudge Important Folk

History, marking the episode with a random line, turns to Stratford-on-Avon and lovingly burnishes the name of one Will Shakespeare, playwright and actor of sorts, once a penurious hanger-on of court—humbly grateful for the haughty approval of such poor lines as might please noble fancy.

When the last Guelph is a vague memory and the mightiest throne a museum exhibit, fame will still celebrate his genius. He puts a girdle around the earth and then eternity. Time does not misjudge important folk.

NEOLITHIC AXE HEAD FOUND

LONDON, April 26.—A curious story lies behind the finding of a neolithic axe head in the parish church yard at Guisley, Yorkshire. It was dug up by the gravedigger, T. M. Thompson, who has been using it for months to scrape the soil from his boots, not being aware of its archaeological value.

Commenting on the discovery, Mr. C. R. Wray of Manor House, Guisley, remarked that it was quite probable that he axe was over 10,000 years old.

Plant Trees

Editor Boston American:

Co-operating with the Governor of this State, with all public and private school officials and with all public-spirited citizens — on Saturday, April 28, which is Arbor Day in this State, we desire to exhort all teachers throughout the Commonwealth to devote a portion of that day to the planting of trees, shrubs and vines—the same typifying the great principle of origin and growth, at the same time beautifying the school buildings and grounds. The great lesson coming from this planting is not so much a lesson in plants, nor yet a lesson in agriculture or forestry, but the greatest good of this work comes from the creative spirit it engenders, with the industry that gathers about. In the advance of the school system of America, and throughout the civilized world, dealing with real things and real life is the watchword—the great life of usefulness before the child calls for more than mere schoolroom instructions from books. As we plant these trees and shrubs, as we press down the soil and sod, let us keep in mind the words of that great sage and lover of nature, "INGENS SUMMA TOTALIBUS VIRORUM ANIMALIUM FLORIBUSQUE" — that great thought so admirably expressed in the Latin tongue.

THE HELPING HAND

Do Not Inclose Stamps. Letters Will Not Be Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls. No Names Are Published.

Has Six Children

Editor Helping Hand:

We are in hard circumstances and have six children with very little money, as daddy was sick so long, but working a little now. He needs pants for work, size for a thin man with small hips, and shirts size 15 neck. I need Summer underwear and a dress and some old aprons for housework and low shoes. I wear size 40 or 42 in dresses and size 6 D or E in shoes. I have two sons, seven and four, and two girls, six and ten, all large for their ages. I can patch and make things over.

MRS. L. S. 2.

Many Offers Received

ED. NOTE—In spite of all efforts, the editor has been unable to find room enough to acknowledge in this column all the kind offers that have been made us rapidly as they are received. There will, therefore, be some delay in published acknowledgements until more space is available. We have felt that room should be found for publication of some of the more urgent cases of need, even though there was no room left for publication of all the offers. All offers will, however, be acknowledged by mail within a day or two of their receipt if they are not published at once.

In Need of Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

May I venture to ask you again for help? My husband makes the small sum of eighteen dollars a week, four of which goes for rent. We are all badly in need of clothes, especially stockings. A kind lady from Newport, R. I., sent me a whole outfit through your column for my newborn baby, but she had nothing for the other children. I have a baby girl, fourteen months, a girl nine, and a boy eight. I wear size 44 and a 5½ shoe. I have a baby girl two weeks old, but he is still at the hospital, as is underweight and they will not let me take him home.

MRS. M. W.

Husband in Hospital

Editor Helping Hand:

I am the mother of three small children. My husband has been in the hospital since last July and is still there. As I am not able to go to work myself because of a small baby, I wonder if there is some kind reader who would send me some clothes for my children? I have a boy seven, a girl three and a baby a year and a half. I wear size 38.

MRS. E. E. D.

Collars and Coat

Editor Helping Hand:

I read the offer of C. A. K. of collars and an overcoat. My husband's overcoat is in rags, and he has no money to buy for Spring, as it takes all he can earn to pay our rent and buy food. We have one child and expect another soon.

MRS. F. V.

ED. NOTE—You will be put in touch with C. A. K.

Needs Crib and Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young mother of two children, a little boy of three who takes size 5 clothing and a little girl of one year. I have been very sick and my husband has been out of work on account of the strike, and I just got along on trying to get something to eat and pay the rent. I do not ask anything for myself, as my sister gives me her clothes, which just fit me, but I need clothes badly for the children and also a crib of any kind for little sister, as she doesn't sleep so well in the bed, where brother moves around in his sleep so much.

MRS. S. H.

A Fine List

Editor Helping Hand:

May I help a little in your wonderful work by submitting this list. The things I offer are not new, but in good condition, and anyone may have them by calling for them.

L. T.

ED. NOTE—A fine list! You will be put in touch with Bessie, Mrs. L. McA. and Mrs. A. L., who will greatly appreciate the things you offer. Thank you.

Ice Chest Offered

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a medium-sized ice chest that I would be pleased to give to some needy family. Will have to dispose of it within a week, as I am obliged to move.

MRS. A. G. M.

ED. NOTE—It will be a good send for some family, and we will hold it for replies. Thank you.

Suit and Overcoat

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a suit, size 40, I would like to give to Mrs. A. K. Also a boy's coat she could have for her two-year-old—new. I would also like to give W. W. an overcoat. If I had their address I could send the things by parcel post. Keep up a good work. I think it is wonderful.

MRS. A. C.

ED. NOTE—The wonderful part is the generosity of you readers. You will be put in touch with the two you mention. Thank you.

Offers Seven Dresses

Editor Helping Hand:

I have seven girls' dresses that would fit a child twelve years old and seven dresses that would fit a girl from six to eight years, a cape that would fit a girl of five and a pair of lady's high boots size 4 D.

MRS. A. G. McC.

ED. NOTE—Mrs. E. R. who has a large family of girls in need of clothes, will be put in touch with you.

Has Books to Give

Editor Helping Hand:

If you can send me the boy's address as per enclosed clipping, I think I can furnish him with books.

W. B.

ED. NOTE—Thank you. S. J. B. will be put in touch with you.

Willing to Work

Editor Helping Hand:

I wonder if some of your kind readers will help a poor widow who is not able to work hard but is willing? I am destitute for clothes. I wear size 40 or 42. Shoes size 5½.

Wants Work After School

Editor Helping Hand:

I am fourteen years old, and I go to high school. I wonder if any of your readers could give me work taking care of babies or light work for afternoons after school in the vicinity of Roxbury? It would help me to buy clothes for myself, as I am the oldest of seven children.

G. McC.
